Listen!

The darkest hour is upon us, but we have no need to fear and no reason for anguish. It has been foretold that our hero will return. Her blade will shine like a thousand stars, and our enemies will cower in its brilliant light. Her voice will ring with the shouts of a thousand warriors, and our enemies will wail and gnash their teeth with fear. And her anger will burn like a thousand suns, and our enemies will be as cinders before her intolerable wrath. It has been foretold that she who broke our chains will come forth once again and lead us to glory and conquest, and in her name we will build an empire to span all worlds, giving no shelter, no succor, and no mercy to those who oppose us. It has been foretold and the time is near. Take heart warrior—Gith has returned, and our ultimate victory is at hand!

SCALES
WAR

Tiamat seized the githyanki city and bleeds it dry to supply her armies with arms, soldiers, and other resources. In doing so, she broke the ancient pact between the githyanki and red dragons, and she inadvertently loosed Gith's soul from the Nine Hells to return to her people once more. Masquerading as Vlaakith reborn, Gith seeks out the Coalition to forge a temporary alliance and hopes to join forces to remove Tiamat from Tu'narath and withdraw the githyanki from the war.

THE QUESTS

In "A Tyranny of Souls," the PCs journey to Citadel Mercane only to discover their contacts dead. From there, the adventurers push on to Tu'narath, where they must rescue the Separatists' leader, negotiate an alliance, and defeat Emperor Zetch'r'r to force Tiamat out of the ancient githyanki city.

Minor Quest—Contact the Separatists

The adventurers are sent to Citadel Mercane to meet with the Separatists' representatives. Finding the representatives murdered, the characters must discover another way to make contact with these rebel githyanki even if this means traveling to Tu'narath.

Reward: 2,400 XP.

Minor Quest—Infiltrate Tu'narath

The githyanki guard their infamous city's location, so travelers seeking out this bastion must find a route to the city and, once there, find a way through the cordon.

Reward: 2,400 XP.

Minor Quest—Rescue Vlaakith

When the characters make contact with the githyanki rebels, they learn the movement is in shambles since the emperor's soldiers captured their leader. The characters must rescue Vlaakith if the Separatists would have a chance to retake the city from Tiamat.

Reward: 2,400 XP.

Minor Quest—Defeat the Emperor

For the Separatists to take command of the city, the emperor must lose control over the dragons. The only way this can happen is if he is defeated and the scepter of Ephelomon—the pact's physical representation—is given to Vlaakith.

Reward: 2,800 XP.

Major Quest—The Githyanki Withdraw from the War

The PCs can negotiate with the Separatists to get them to withdraw from the war and in doing so deliver a terrible setback to Tiamat's plans.

Reward: 14,000 XP.

Bonus: +2,400 XP if the characters secure a 1,000-year reprieve.

Bonus: +2,800 XP if the characters secure an alliance.

"A Tyranny of Souls" is an adventure for five 19th-level characters. By its end, the player characters should be 21st level. With some adaptation, however, you can run this adventure as a stand-alone scenario or as part of your own campaign.

BACKGROUND

Tiamat casts a dark shadow across the ancient githyanki city of Tu'narath, but the city is no stranger to evil's machinations. Having endured the Lich-Queen's thousand-year reign, the city has witnessed astonishing wickedness. All was to have changed with Vlaakith's assassination, but the vacuum she created plunged the city into turmoil, with military commanders and pretenders all vying for her throne. When a leader emerged to right its course, though, it would lead the githyanki into greater darkness in Tiamat's thrall.

The githyanki have never knelt to a god, but desperate times demand desperate actions. The Lich-Queen's death threatened to tear Tu'narath apart, and the githyanki were no closer to correcting their course. Zetch'r'r had a strong claim to the throne, but his radical views and his involvement in Vlaakith's death made him unpopular with the conservative factions. While he argued and fought, less worthy ascendants each put forward their own claims.

Zetch'r'r lacked sufficient strength to take the city by force, but each day he delayed, the damage and violence escalated. Like Gith so long ago, Zetch'r'r turned to Tiamat for aid. The dark goddess, with plans of her own, proved a willing ally. She had long coveted greater influence over the githyanki, but she saw the ancient pact as an obstacle. She offered to help, promising to give Zetch'r'r full control over the dragons in the city in exchange for his unwavering loyalty and fealty. Zetch'r'r knelt, and his rise to power was assured.

Bolstered by red dragons, dragonspawn, and devil mercenaries, Zetch'r'r dashed his enemies and crushed all opposition in a single week. Amid the ruins of Vlaakith's old palace, Tiamat's dark priests crowned Zetch'r'r emperor and the new tyrant declared his bold plans for his people, including a renewed commitment to the crusade against the mind flayers and a new peace with their estranged kin, the githzerai. His promises amounted to little, for Tiamat had other plans.

The Dark Lady needed soldiers for her armies, weapons for her troops, and a base to launch new attacks against her enemies. Tu'narath provided all these things. Zetch'r'r's goals stood in Tiamat's way, and so, by her decree, the githyanki would abandon their campaign against the mind flayers and refocus their efforts to combat Tiamat's foes. Zetch'r'r had no choice but to accept his mistress's commands, and thus was Tu'narath's new course set.

What neither Tiamat nor Zetch'r'r realized was that by abandoning the Eternal Crusade, they rendered the ancient compact between the githyanki and the red dragons void. Without the pact, Gith, who's soul long-languished in Dispater's cells in the Nine Hells, was free to find the oblivion long-owed her in the Shadowfell, but this ancient hero was not finished yet.

ADVENTURE SYNOPSIS

A few days before the adventure begins, a githyanki envoy representing the Separatists presented himself before the Coalition to gauge their interests in forming a short-term alliance. The representative explained that not all githyanki are so eager to die for Tiamat, and many see their service to the dark goddess as slavery. The envoy invites the Coalition to send representatives to Citadel Mercane, where they can bargain on neutral ground, free from Tiamat's ever-present eyes. Although the Coalition suspects a trap, the opportunity to weaken Tiamat's armies is too good to pass up. The adventurers, who have proved capable allies, are chosen to serve as ambassadors and negotiate the terms on the Coalition's behalf.

The heroes make the journey to Citadel Mercane, but they soon discover their contacts are missing or dead. Meeting up with a possible ally, a disguised raavasta (see Manual of the Planes[™], page 136), to help navigate the trade center, the PCs learn the Separatists are active in Tu'narath and that they must travel there and contact them if they would get them to withdraw from the war.

In the githyanki city, the PCs learn the emperor is wise to their intent and has moved to capture and kill many Separatist leaders, plus he has traps in place for the adventurers. They eventually encounter a Separatist agent who informs them that Vlaakith, their leader, was taken prisoner and is held at the Fortress of Three Sorrows. By freeing her, the PCs can demonstrate their goodwill and also give the rebel faction renewed hope and drive to fight against Tiamat's agents.

The characters travel to the floating fortress, battle through its defenses, and fight their way to Vlaakith's "cell." There, they learn from the aspect of Dispater, who has come to steal back the soul inhabiting her body, that the legendary warrior Gith possesses the young githyanki woman.

Once the characters free her and restore Vlaakith to the Separatists, they can engage in the negotiations for which they were sent. The Separatists agree to withdraw the githyanki from Tiamat's war, but admit their promises are worthless as long as Zetch'r'r is in power. The githyanki ask the PCs to infiltrate his palace, defeat the usurper, and recover the scepter of Ephelomon. Meanwhile, the Separatists will attack Tiamat's garrisons and retake the city. The adventure concludes in a deadly battle against the emperor and his red dragon cohort in his personal chambers, while battles rage in the skies above and in the city streets. If the PCs succeed, Tu'narath becomes free from Tiamat and the githyanki can once more follow their own destinies. If they fail, there will be no stopping Tiamat's wrath.

MANAGING THE ADVENTURE

Although "A Tyranny of Souls" has a straightforward plot, the players have several choices and options for completing the various parts, allowing the adventure to unfold in an organic fashion. Giving meaningful choices means the PCs might skip over some encounters, and in doing so, they might lag behind in XP or miss out on important treasure. Many encounters provided adaptation entries to help you repurpose them for later use in the adventure. Alternatively, you can use the smaller sample encounters to offer additional challenges. Just move the treasure the characters missed to these improvised combats. Shifting encounters helps you create the illusion of success from cleverness without diminishing the XP and treasure the characters ought to earn.

PREPARING FOR ADVENTURE

“A Tyranny of Souls” takes the adventurers into the Astral Sea. The characters begin by exploring Citadel Mercane, an ancient trade center built within the heart of a crimson mountain, where they hope to meet with the Separatists’ agents. From the citadel, the characters travel across the Astral Sea to Tu’narath. Once there, the PCs might explore the Merchant District, attack a floating fortress, and ultimately assault the Chromatic Bastion, seat of Zetch’r’s power.

WHAT YOU NEED TO PLAY

Aside from the core rulebooks, “A Tyranny of Souls” references information from three other sources. “Tu’narath, City of Death” in Dragon® Magazine #377 provides a comprehensive history and overview of the githyanki and their city. The Manual of the Planes provides extensive information on the Astral Sea and its inhabitants and should prove a useful resource for adding more detail than given in this adventure. Finally, a few tactical encounters feature vehicles. While the key information you need to use vehicles is included in an appendix, Adventurer’s Vault™ provides the complete rules.

Several tactical encounters involve challenging environments, mounts, and three-dimensional combat. Be sure to review “Movement in Three Dimensions, Mounted Combat, and Flying” in the Dungeon Master’s Guide® (pages 45–48) before running this adventure.

USING TACTICAL ENCOUNTERS

Each encounter includes several common elements, as described below.

ENCOUNTER LEVEL

Each tactical encounter assumes a group of five player characters. An encounter of average difficulty is one where the encounter level is equal to the level of the party. Encounters that are 1 or 2 levels lower than the party are easy encounters, while encounters that are 2 or more levels higher than the party are difficult encounters.

For overcoming an encounter, a group earns the XP value noted beside the encounter level. This amount should be divided by the number of group members, with an equal amount awarded to each character.

SETUP

This section of a tactical encounter provides you with the basic parameters of the encounter. It gives you a key to the monsters in the encounter so you can locate them on the tactical map, then provides context or background information. The map of each encounter area indicates where the monsters are located when the encounter begins. The setup section also describes what monsters are doing and how they react when the PCs arrive.

Some encounters include monsters that are hidden or that do not appear until later in combat. Do not place those monsters on the map unless at least one PC has succeeded on the Perception check to notice them, or when they enter combat.

READ-ALoud TEXT

Read-aloud text provides information about what the characters can see and are aware of. You do not have to read it word for word. Especially where read-aloud text is provided in a question-and-answer format, feel free to paraphrase and use your own words when describing the information presented. Use read-aloud text wisely. It is written for the most common approach to a particular situation, but the PCs’ actions might require you to alter the information in any number of ways.

ADAPTING THE ADVENTURE

As written, “A Tyranny of Souls” is for five characters at 19th level. If the characters are of slightly higher level, you might cut an encounter or two, and you might also cut treasure parcels if the PCs have already attained them during a previous adventure. If the characters are below 19th level, you can use the additional encounters provided in the text to catch up the adventurers as needed.

Parties with four or fewer player characters need more opportunities to take extended rests, so you might make some combats easier or spread them out. You might also reduce the complexities of skill challenges since there are fewer participants.

For larger parties, simply add additional creatures or hazards to combats using the guidelines presented in the Dungeon Master’s Guide. Larger parties might need fewer extended rests and so you can tighten the plot to move the characters from one scene to the next. As well, skill challenges will become easier for larger groups, so consider increasing the complexities by 1 or more depending on the party’s size.

MONSTER STATISTICS

Encounters include statistics blocks for each monster type present in the encounter. If more than one monster of a particular kind is present, the statistics block indicates how many creatures can be found.

WHAT IS AN ADVENTURE PATH?

An adventure path is a connected series of adventures that comprises an entire D&D® campaign, from the heroes' humble beginnings at 1st level to their epic triumphs at the pinnacle of level 30. These adventures cover all three tiers of play: heroic, paragon, and epic. Each tier is covered by roughly six adventures, meaning that the entire adventure path consists of eighteen adventures. Each adventure covers between one and three levels, but you can also have the PCs undertake side quests to help supplement XP. This assures that the PCs are the correct level to tackle each adventure.

This adventure path is meant to be a complete D&D campaign. That means we're making some assumptions about the history and mythology of the world as the adventures progress, such as Queen Vlaakith's death (an event we've adopted from the adventure "The Lich Queen's Beloved" in DUNGEON Magazine #100). As the adventure path moves into the epic tier, you can look forward to the appearance of some classic heroes and villains from D&D history, as well as great ideas from past issues of DUNGEON Magazine and other sources.

TREASURE

The adventure uses the "parcel" technique of treasure distribution as described in the Dungeon Master's Guide. Use the following 20 treasure parcels. When determining which magic items are present, consult your players' wish lists. If an item is appropriate for a monster to use in an encounter, feel free to let it, noting the item's features and making changes to the stat-block as needed.

Parcel 1: _____, Magic item, level 23.

Parcel 2: _____, Magic item, level 22.

Parcel 3: _____, Magic item, level 21.

Parcel 4: _____, Magic item, level 20.

Parcel 5: _____, 6 astral diamonds.

Parcel 6: _____, 2 gems of valor (Adventurer's Vault 191), 3 potions of vigor (level 19, Adventurer's Vault 189), talisman of good fortune (Adventurer's Vault 168), and 4,400 gp worth of residuum.

Parcel 7: _____, 3 astral diamonds, 50 pp.

Parcel 8: _____, 300 pp and 5 potions of vitality.

Parcel 9: _____, Ritual scroll of Planar Portal and 1,000 gp of residuum.

Parcel 10: _____, Trethrix's palanquin (page 60), fine clothing worth 1,200 gp, and a pouch containing 70 pp.

Parcel 11: _____, Magic item, level 24.

Parcel 12: _____, Magic item, level 23.

Parcel 13: _____, Magic item, level 22.

Parcel 14: _____, Magic item, level 21.

Parcel 15: _____, 600 pp and two diamonds worth 5,000 gp each.

Parcel 16: _____, 16,000 gp; a silvery cloak spun from astral thread, a mithral mirror, and golden idol of Tiamat, each valued at 15,000 gp.

Parcel 17: _____, 400 pp and 2 frozen potions of vitality (can't be used until 5 minutes after being removed from the chamber).

Parcel 18: _____, 8 gems worth 5,000 gp each and two fire opals worth 1,000 gp each.

Parcel 19: _____, 21,000 gp.

Parcel 20: _____, astral skiff and 1,000 gp.

TACTICS

This entry describes special actions the monsters take to defeat the adventurers. Sometimes this means the monsters take advantage of special features of the area or make use of special powers or equipment.

MAP

Each encounter includes a map keyed with the initial locations of each monster. The map also indicates the location of any special features of the area.

FEATURES OF THE AREA

This section describes special features noted on the map. If the location has items or areas of interest with which the characters can interact, those features are described here. Look here to see if a door is out of the ordinary, if an altar has a secret compartment, and the like.

STARTING THE ADVENTURE

The adventure begins not long after the adventurers complete “Garaitha’s Anvil,” long enough for them to recover, but before the characters have a chance to spend their gold and resupply. The initial meeting with the githyanki envoy happens off-stage (though it doesn’t have to), and once the Coalition comes to a decision about how to respond to the invitation, Amyria turns to her friends and allies: the adventurers. The following encounter occurs wherever the PCs are resting between adventures.

Read the following aloud, and break it up as needed if the players wish to interject a comment or question.

Amyria appears in a flash of light. Two human mages in gray robes and carrying staffs accompany her. She looks around to gain her bearings, and then toward you. She smiles, but there’s no joy in it and her eyes are hard, fierce, and filled with worry.

“Friends, I apologize for dropping in unexpected, but events force my hand. Again, I’m afraid, the Coalition needs your aid. You know the threat the githyanki pose: They are integral to the Dark Lady’s plans. We have an opportunity to change this and deliver a terrible blow to the Chromatic Dragon if you are willing.

“A few days ago, a githyanki envoy came before the Coalition with an offer. He represented the Separatists, a rebel faction within Tu’narath, the githyanki’s greatest city. What he described was troubling: Tiamat rules through a puppet emperor named Zetch’r’r and he uses the city poorly, draining it of resources to supply Tiamat’s war machine.

“He admitted his people have no love for us, but he also explained this war was not of their making and has proved too costly to continue.

“Friends, they want an alliance! Yes, it seems suspect, a trap perhaps, but can we afford to turn away new allies in our time of need?”

“We discussed the matter and we have agreed to send envoys of our own to meet with their representatives. With the recent troubles, and your incomparable successes, we turn to you for aid. We want you to negotiate an alliance with these rebels and get the githyanki out of this war. If we can achieve this, our victory might very well be at hand.”

Amyria stops here and lets the PCs ask questions, argue, and say whatever they want. She knows this is a risky venture, but she believes the adventurers are up to the task, given their record. Assuming they agree, she explains what the PCs need to do.

“The githyanki want to meet on neutral ground. Their representatives will not meet here, and we’re not willing to step into the viper’s nest of Tu’narath. We agreed to meet at the Citadel Mercane, a trade depot in the Astral Sea. There, you will negotiate for an alliance. Your aim is to get the githyanki to withdraw from the war. We have faith in you and your wisdom, so you can bargain with the Coalition’s full authority. If their offer is genuine, failure is no option. Should the negotiations unravel, I don’t know that we can win this.”

Amyria knows little else, although the PCs are to ask for Rel’thrik at the Dreaming Spire in the citadel. She has learned that Citadel Mercane was raised by planar merchants centuries ago, but inner strife and upheavals have seen the power shift to the Society of Seven Diamonds, a cabal of ruthless merchants and traders. The Citadel has a cosmopolitan environment, so the adventurers should have little trouble blending in and picking up whatever supplies they need. Amyria warns the characters that Tiamat has operatives everywhere and the adventurers should be watchful for spies and assassins.

When the characters are ready, the two mages begin the ritual’s performance. It takes 10 minutes, and when they complete it, a shimmering opening appears in the middle of the circle they inscribed on the floor. When all the characters step through, proceed to Blood Mountain.

ALTERNATE HOOKS

Even if you are not running “A Tyranny of Souls” as part of the Scales of War adventure path, you can still use the adventure as a stand-alone scenario. Consider any of the following adventure hooks.

ANCIENT EVIL

Kastya Zurityh-Movya, a githyanki lich and expatriate hiding in the Shadowfell, has long harbored a grudge against his people and hungers for revenge against Vlaakith. With the recent troubles bubbling up from Tiamat’s influence in the city, Kastya senses an opportunity. Sending his lieutenant Iliss Githom-Vaas to recruit the PCs residing in Gloomwrought, he asks them to negotiate an alliance with the new Vlaakith to see to his return to the city and secure a place in her new regime. The PCs might agree given that a change in power would ultimately weaken the githyanki threat, but they might also secure a thousand-year reprieve from the githyanki in which these planar raiders would not attack their world for a specified time.

CHAOS REIGNS

While taking some well-deserved downtime in Sigil (or elsewhere), the heroes are approached by a coalition of githzerai and Xaositects—a faction devoted to Chaos. The coalition has learned that Gith has escaped the Nine Hells and now leads a Separatist faction within Tu'narath. The githzerai believe Gith's return could fracture and weaken the githyanki, while the Xaositects simply want to spread unrest. To these ends, the coalition recruits the PCs to negotiate an alliance with the Separatists and foment a bloody civil war.

THE ONE IN THE VOID

When Vlaakith CLVII worked to steal the divine spark residing within the One in the Void (see “The Lich Queen's Beloved” in DUNGEON Magazine #100), she inadvertently stirred the corpse's consciousness. The dead god now dreams, and in its visions it sees a disturbing future, one in which the Far Realm spills into the mortal world and unravels the cosmos. Believing the githyanki are vital to combating the impending mind flayer empire that will begin the invasion, the dead god scours the natural world for heroes to restore the githyanki to their proper purpose and release them from Tiamat's clutches. Plagued with disturbing visions and dreams, the PCs travel to Tu'narath and in doing so learn of Tiamat's plot and the Separatist movement to oust her puppet from the githyanki throne. If the PCs help the Separatists, they can secure an alliance with the githyanki to attend to the mind flayer threat growing in the natural world.

PART ONE: BLOOD MOUNTAIN

The mages' portal opens onto the mountain slopes just outside the entrance to Citadel Mercane.

The portal transports you to a blood-red shelf overlooking a jagged slope that eventually gives way to loose bits of rock and debris hanging in the Astral Sea. Above, the scarlet mountain rises toward a distant peak, obscured by petrified trees, jutting protrusions, and roiling mist. A path winds up the mountain to a massive cleft from which sulfurous smoke streams. A strange vessel emerges from the plume, sleek and fitted with sails, spheres crackling with lightning, and other spars, and then it vanishes in a flash of light.

Blood Mountain has a sinister reputation and for good reason. According to legend, the mountain is an ancient battlefield where god and primordial fought and died. Their spilled blood turned the mountain its crimson color. The place is by no means safe, because in the ruins clinging to its surface and beneath the petrified trees foresting its rugged slopes lurk astral stalkers, blood fiends, and worse.

HELP OR HINDRANCE?

The Separatists truly intended to meet the council's envoys at Citadel Mercane, but Tiamat's operatives dashed these plans, murdering them before the PCs arrive. Among the retinue and the only one to survive was a raavasta spy named Mayhem. The fiend infiltrated the githyanki long ago and accompanied the group hoping to muck it up. When Tiamat's agents attacked, they upset his plans and now he's quite upset with the goddess.

When the adventurers head toward the smoking cleft, they encounter Mayhem disguised as a strange humanoid creature, but before they have a chance to speak, the mountain's denizens attack.

Tactical Encounter: Mayhem's Plight (page 53).

CONSEQUENCES

Defeating the blood fiends and saving Mayhem can give the PCs an edge later when they enter the githyanki city. If Mayhem is unharmed in the fight, the characters gain one future victory toward finding the githyanki city (page 55). If Mayhem flees or is killed, the PCs suffer one defeat instead.

AFTERMATH

Once the blood fiends are destroyed or driven off, Mayhem approaches the adventurers (if he didn't run away).

The odd fellow approaches and says, “Many thanks my friends. Had not you interceded on this humble servant's behalf, poor Mayhem would have found the Raven Queen's unwelcome embrace, but not before enduring the equally unpleasant teeth and claws of those terrible brutes. In exchange for your heroic intervention to save this unworthy life, I am duty-bound to return the favor if you will allow me. But first, introductions are undoubtedly in order. As my errant words may have indicated already, I am Mayhem, your humbled and indebted servant. Citadel Mercane is very much my home away from home; perhaps I can be of some service?”

Mayhem might be a useful ally to the adventurers in spite of his evil alignment and dubious morals. The raavasta knows a great deal about the planes and can provide assistance as shown in later sections. The fiend's willingness to help stems from his newfound hatred for Tiamat combined with the hope for a new and terrible war in the Astral Sea, which he believes will result when and if the Separatists come to power in Tu'narath.

The raavasta knows the route to Tu'narath, and he also knows what happened to the Separatists' envoys, but he doesn't share this information right away or explain how he witnessed his companions' death. Instead, he waits and watches, gauging the characters' worthiness and planning to manipulate events from behind the scenes to ensure Vlaakith eventually comes to power.

Mayhem never participates in combat, and he disappears while the fighting rages only to reappear once it's done. He follows the PCs, giving advice when requested, but never volunteering anything. If the PCs dismiss him, he continues to monitor them, but from afar, and might assume different identities to ingratiate himself with the adventurers.

ADDITIONAL ENCOUNTERS

If the PCs don't head for the cleft and to Citadel Mercane beyond right away, they can explore the mountain. It's a desolate peak, haunted by wreckage from the ancient war and littered with bones. While exploring, the PCs are bound to come across the mountain's inhabitants, and none are friendly.

AGENTS OF MEPHISTOPHELES

Level 19 Encounter (XP 12,950)

2 ice devils (Monster Manual[®], page 63)

4 legion devil legionnaires (Monster Manual, page 64)

1 war devil (Monster Manual, page 67)

When Gith escaped the Iron Tower in the Nine Hells, Dispater sent his aspect to chase her down. All this activity has not gone unnoticed by the arch-devil's rivals, and Mephistopheles has sent agents of his own to discover what Dispater is after and to thwart him if possible. These agents followed Tiamat's forces from Tu'narath and witnessed the destruction of the githyanki envoys. The devils lurk in a petrified forest, where they argue about what they should do next.

CRIMSON HUNTERS

Level 21 Encounter (XP 16,600)

2 astral stalkers (Monster Manual, page 10)

Blood Mountain is home to astral stalker tribes, and their numbers are so great, few travelers risk exploring the mountain's ruins. The astral stalkers prowl the slopes invisibly, watching for intruders and slaughtering any they find for trophies.

CITADEL MERCANE

Deep in the mountain, reached only by an enormous fissure, stands Citadel Mercane. Built centuries ago by a race of planar merchants to serve as a trade hub for their enterprise, the citadel still serves in this capacity, but also as a refuge for exiles, criminals, and other planar scum. The founders have long since vanished, ceding power to the marut mercenaries who were hired to guard the settlement and to a new cabal known as the Seven Diamonds Society.

The characters must pass through the cleft and travel nearly a half-mile into the mountain to reach the outpost.

The mists thin and give way to an enormous chamber, easily a mile in diameter. Red crystals as long as towers encrust the walls. Suspended in the chamber's center is a spheroid architectural mass of minarets, walls, stairs, and bridges. Steel struts emerge from the fortress and extend to the walls to keep it in place. Piers bristle from these supports, looking like hairs from afar, but you can see an astounding assortment of vessels, ranging from tiny skiffs to astral hulks crewed by hundreds. Traffic moves through yawning gates constructed to resemble toothy mouths. You can see a half-dozen facing your direction.

No bridges grant access to the Citadel, but the Astral Sea's nature allows even non-flying individuals to fly. It's about a quarter-mile through the air to reach the fortress, and so it takes about five minutes to cross the distance.

MANEUVERING IN THE ASTRAL SEA

A creature can stand on any surface equal to or larger than its base. It gains the ability to fly at one-half its normal speed if not under the effect of gravity. It can hover, but it is a clumsy flier. A creature with the ability to fly can use its innate flying speed instead. It gains hover.

Tu'narath and Subjective Gravity: Anyone within 200 feet of a surface in Tu'narath is subject to normal gravity. (See "Tu'narath, City of Death" in Dragon #377 for more information about the city.)

CITADEL MERCANE

A trade compound in the heart of a mountain, Citadel Mercane sees traffic from all sorts of planar peoples.

Population: 9,000. The Citadel boasts a diverse population consisting of just about every kind of civilized creature imaginable, from angels to devils, from humans to maruts. Githyanki are numerous since they often duck into the Citadel to trade plunder for supplies.

Government: The Society of Seven Diamonds rules Citadel Mercane with the permission of the marut mercenary companies who enforce the law here. The Society is made up of seven raavasta, each of whom conceals its true appearance behind a mask. The high cabalist is Tordaka, a raavasta who appears in public as a humanoid with golden skin and sporting overlarge feathery wings. His greatest rival is a corrupt and decadent fiend named Trethrix, who prefers the disguise of a svelte young woman.

Defense: The maruts protect the stronghold from attacks. Three mercenary companies billet here, and the Iron Sons are the oldest and have the most influence.

Commerce: A bustling black market thrives in the Citadel, and any goods can be had for a price. Drugs, poisons, cursed items, terrible rituals, astral vessels, magic items, slaves, and anything one could want are all for sale. Most trading takes place in the open-air market that sprawls just inside the outer wall and surrounds the inner fortress. The best inn and tavern is the Dreaming Spire, boasting thirty rooms and a menu with cuisines hailing from no less than a dozen worlds and a hundred civilizations.

Organizations: Temples of any sort are not permitted in the Citadel, but priests of every god, living and dead, are free to move about the city. Many planar factions including the Xaositects, the Fated, the Mercykillers, and even the Doomguard have offices here.

THE BAZAAR

Just inside the outer wall is the floating bazaar, an insane collection of floating platforms and free-floating structures filled with planar travelers.

Even before you pass through the gate, you get a sense of the chaos and wonder of the Bazaar. It is a maze of floating earthmotes, each crowded with merchants hawking their wares. Visitors float from stall to stall, swapping platinum coins for all manner of goods. You spy larger structures too, some sideways towers, others spherical buildings, while others still could pass for ordinary in your native world if not for the fact that they float about, drifting through the marketplace. Astonishingly, there are no collisions even though everything is in motion.

Beyond, or perhaps beneath, is an interior wall, hundreds of feet away, and it sports more gates and tall statues of strange humanoids that look up at commerce's dance above.

Merchants use stalls situated on small earthmotes ranging from 2-by-2 platforms to more sizeable structures containing bits of architecture, fossilized bones, and other oddities. The free-floating maze is in constant motion, so mapping the place is both unnecessary and impossible. To help navigate the Bazaar, tiny mechanical servants—guides—flit through the crowds, offering aid to any traveler who appears lost. These creations are artfully crafted, each unique and strange. Examples included tiny dragons, cherubic babies, metal skulls with glowing eyes, shimmering balls of light, and so on. Each guide is a construct with AC 27, other defenses 22; 1 hp. They cannot attack, and they explode in a shower of harmless sparks if destroyed.

Using a guide or not, the PCs can find just about anything they could want here. Let the PCs sell off equipment, make purchases, and make any other preparations they need before proceeding with the adventure.

INNER SPHERE

Below the Bazaar is the Inner Sphere, a sealed orb of stone and iron pierced by a half dozen gates protected by adamantine doors that have powerful wards placed upon them. No one outside of the Society of the Seven Diamonds and the marut bodyguards are permitted within the sphere. Standing all across its surface are twenty-foot tall statues depicting the Citadel's founders. Some say the statues are in fact the founders, now forever trapped in stone.

Rumors hold the Inner Sphere contains vast wealth and plenty. It is a paradise of which one can only dream. Outsiders clamber to catch a glimpse of what goes on beyond its walls, but none have seen anything but shifting mists.

The rumors are wrong. The Inner Sphere holds a hideous wound in the Astral Sea—a permanent rent allowing passage to the Abyss. The raavasta, who hail from the Elemental Chaos, use this portal to move between planes.

WORD ON THE STREET

Characters might make Streetwise checks in the Bazaar to learn general information about the place. Mayhem grants the PCs gain a +2 bonus to their Streetwise checks.

DC Information

- 20 Citadel Mercane has stood for a thousand years and is a popular trade center for the merchants across the Astral Sea.
- 25 The Citadel is open to all, provided visitors respect its laws. The most important commandment is “Harm no one.” The watch does not tolerate violence in the city, and those who break this law are either cast out or executed. There are exceptions, though. Why just the other day, a group of githyanki from Tu'narath was slaughtered outside the Dreaming Spire. The maruts did nothing and no one knows why.
- 35 Merchants run this city. They rarely emerge from the Sphere (the inner compound), but when they do, there is much fanfare and celebration.
- 40 There are whispers that the ruling cabal murdered and replaced the rightful lords of the Citadel. A century ago, the original rulers just up and vanished, and the new cabal moved in right after.

BUYING AND SELLING

The characters can purchase any magic item, ritual, or alchemical formula of their level or lower without any trouble. A specific item above their level requires a DC 27 Streetwise check to locate. Finding an astral vessel or a sigil address requires a bit more work, as described in the following entries.

Characters can also find buyers in the city. Items of the characters' level or less sell for the standard resell price. Selling items above the characters' levels can bring a slightly higher price with negotiation. A character can accept the flat price or engage in a complexity 1 skill challenge (4 successes before 3 failures) involving DC 22 Bluff, Diplomacy, and Insight checks. A success sees the character receive one-quarter of the item's price, while failure results in one-sixth of its value. The character must accept these terms.

LOOSED DEMONS

At some point while the adventurers explore the Bazaar, they discover just how dangerous Citadel Mercane can be.

Tactical Encounter: Demons Among Us (page 56).

Consequences: Defeating the goristro demons gives the PCs an edge when trying to enter the city. Destroying them counts as one victory.

THE DREAMING SPIRE

There are no shortages for places to stay, but characters looking for accommodations find the Dreaming Spire is their best choice (especially since they were to meet the envoys here). A strange structure, it looks almost like a tree rising from the middle of the market. Both the top and bottom are taverns called Night and Day respectively, and the main walled area—the trunk—holds thirty rooms. Guests can arrange for rooms and meals in either tavern.

When the PCs ask after Rel'thrik, they learn he was killed in the streets by a huge blue dragonspawn and dark angels. The human bartender looks closely at the PCs, sighs, and then hands them a small metal box. He says, “He said people'd come looking for him and left it for them. Guess those people would be you, huh?”

The metal box is bronze and featureless except for a thumb-sized groove on the bottom. Placing a digit in the groove causes the box to float upward and unfold. Appearing in the center is a shimmering illusion of the githyanki they were to meet. It speaks at once, “My mission has failed. The Dark Lady's agents infest this place, and our efforts have proved insufficient to evade them. If you truly wish to make an alliance, come to Tu'narath and we will find you.” The illusion flickers and dies. Moments later, the box evaporates as if it had never been.

GITHYANKI QUESTIONS

The characters might ask around for general information on Tu'narath and the githyanki to get a better sense of what they are about to get into. Characters can make Streetwise checks in place of Nature checks for Githyanki Lore (Monster Manual, page 129). In addition, a successful DC 40 check reveals, "A little over twenty years ago, the Lich-Queen fell victim to a coup, murdered in her palace during a dread ritual that would have catapulted her to divinity. The city fell into bloody civil war until a warrior named Zetch'r'r claimed her throne. Some say he managed this only because he made a deal with Tiamat."

RUNNING AFOUL OF THE LAW

Level 21 Encounter (XP 16,000)

5 marut blademasters (Monster Manual, page 185)

If the characters are on their best behavior, they aren't likely to find too much trouble. However, their investigations might take them into danger and, by extension, combat. Since rule zero in the Citadel is "harm no one," a fight could cause the PCs problems.

Once the characters get into a fight, they have a 10% chance each day they spend in the city of encountering the Citadel's watch. Combats after the first increase the chance by 20%, so 30% per day for two fights, 50% for three, and so on. A typical combat with the watch features the creatures here. If the PCs defeat the watch, they must move quickly lest the full weight of the Citadel's wrath comes crashing upon them (featuring whatever epic-level monsters you feel are appropriate).

TO THE GITHYANKI CITY

With the githyanki contacts dead, the adventurers can either return home or push on to Tu'narath. Getting there is a challenge since the githyanki guard the routes to their city and also keep secret any shortcuts that might allow swift passage. Though the information they seek is secret and often guarded, the PCs can uncover ways to reach the city with a little effort.

Skill Challenge: Finding Tu'narath (page 55).

DEALING WITH THE DEVIL

A failed Bluff check made as part of the "Finding Tu'narath" skill challenge (page 55) or inquiries made in the Citadel's dark underbelly (a DC 28 Streetwise check) turns up a name: Scaramandar. A crime lord, information-broker, and cambion, Scaramandar has extensive contacts throughout the Astral Sea, with eyes and ears from the natural world to Sigil and most places in between. He's a useful sort to befriend, if you can afford his steep prices.

The cambion knows all about the adventurers and their past exploits. He also knows what they are after, what happened to their contacts, and, best of all, how to get to Tu'narath. Scaramandar possesses a sigil address to a little-used teleportation circle hidden within Tu'narath's Merchant District. He also can fabricate the proper documentation to get the characters into the city and through the cordon. All of this is available at no charge, if, and only if, the PCs agree to do him a favor.

Scaramandar wants a seat on the Society of Seven Diamonds. Trethrix, a particularly corrupt and decadent member, blocks his ascent. The cambion is certain, thanks to promises from other members, that her removal will open the path to his ascent. Scaramandar isn't about to get his hands dirty, and the PCs represent an excellent way to get rid of his rival and remove the killers by sending them to what he believes is certain death in the githyanki city.

When the PCs start asking around about Scaramandar, the cambion sends two agents to arrange a meeting at a place Scaramandar controls. The servants are a pair of rakshasa nobles (Monster Manual, page 217) disguised to be appealing to the adventurers. The rakshasas invite the PCs to meet with their master at Night (the tavern at the Dreaming Spire) for a meal and a profitable conversation. If the characters agree, they can meet at whatever time they wish.

Seated in a large chair at a table crowded with a dozen handsome mortals representing several different races is an overlarge humanoid with an infernal mien. He has crimson skin, curling black horns emerging from his forehead, and long, oiled black hair, all of which suggests some devilish ancestry. He smiles and stands, revealing brilliant robes of uncertain hues embroidered with obscene images. He spreads his arms wide in a gesture of welcome. His playthings scatter. "Greetings friends. It comes to my attention you have need of information. Perhaps I can help."

Scaramandar starts by describing what happened to the githyanki operatives, revealing that a bluespawn godslayer leading a force of angels ambushed the envoys and murdered them all. The maruts didn't respond because Tiamat's forces had made arrangements with a "Diamond" named Trethrix—she paid off the merchant princess in exchange for no reprisals.

The cambion then steers the conversation to the adventurers' mission, but, if the characters seem worried, he says, "You have nothing to fear from me friends. I think your task is worthy, though I fear the obstacles placed in your path might be too great without friendly assistance." Scaramandar then lays out his offer—a ritual scroll of Planar Portal, a sigil address to Tu'narath, and trade exemptions for all. In exchange, he asks the characters to assassinate Trethrix: "Kill her, and you'll be in the githyanki city before her blood dries." Scaramandar honors the bargain, and any Insight check reveals this fact.

Scaramandar is not worried the PCs will betray him. He knows quite a bit about their activities, and his information would be of extensive interest to Zetch'r'r. He might share what he knows with Tiamat's operatives (as you decide).

Scaramandar fights back if the PCs attack him, and four rakshasa nobles hidden in the crowd come to his aid straightaway. A battle here draws the maruts' attention too. Five marut blademasters show up at the start of the third round, coming to Scaramandar's aid and making the entire battle very one-sided against the adventurers.

The cambion supplies additional information if the PCs agree to his proposal.

"Excellent friends, excellent. Trethrix and her retinue are due to make their appearance in 12 hours. She is at her most vulnerable once she returns to the inner sphere. Opening and closing those portals takes about 5 minutes, so when she arrives she must wait for the gate to open. Strike then and strike quick, lest the Iron Sons appear and foil the attempt. When you finish, bring her head to me just beyond the cleft. There, all I have promised you will be yours. I warn you, if the maruts catch you, I can do nothing to help you. Agreed?"

With their mission in hand, the PCs are free to make any needed arrangements before they attack.

Tactical Encounter: The Devil's Bargain (page 58).

Adaptation: Rather than have this encounter take place in Citadel Mercane, you could run it in Tu'narath. Characters seeking access to the Fortress of Three Sorrows could turn to the cambion for assistance. Trethrix is a rival merchant who is blackmailing him, and he would see her removed.

In exchange for her murder, Scaramandar gives the PCs a ritual scroll, ingredients, and sigil address to a permanent teleportation circle in room 1 of the Floating Fortress. In this scenario, the raavasta target does not get marut reinforcements; she's on her own.

THE MERCILESS

The characters might think to steal an astral skiff on their own or get a hint to do so from a failed Endurance check during the "Finding Tu'narath" skill challenge. Plenty of vessels are docked at the piers outside the Citadel, and a group could hijack a vessel without too much trouble.

Characters snooping around the docks find a lone ship at the end of a pier. A Streetwise check can turn up useful information about the ship.

DC	Information
14	The Merciless hails from Tu'narath and is captained by a cruel and murderous githyanki warrior named Ri's'an. It's currently docked at the end of Pier Nine.
22	The ship took heavy damage during a raid on Hestavar and could not return to the githyanki city. The Merciless has been docked here for a few weeks, undergoing repairs. The repairs are all but complete, but the crew took heavy casualties during the raid.
27	The crew has made few friends here, and if something bad were to happen, it's not likely they would get any help.

The characters can attack the ship without fear of attracting attention. The other captains detest these githyanki and turn a blind eye to any violence toward Ri's'an and his crew.

Tactical Encounter: Stolen Mercy (see 61).

Adapting the Encounter: You can run this encounter while the PCs are in Tu'narath. If the PCs need a way to reach the Fortress of Three Sorrows, the Merciless could get them there if they eliminate the captain and crew.

Consequences: A bold move to be sure, but one with far-reaching consequences. The ship is identified by the dragonknights, costing the PCs 2 defeats when trying to enter the city.

SHORTCUTS THROUGH THE VOID

The githyanki are vigilant in protecting Tu'narath and thus monitor all traffic coming into and out of the city, boarding vessels, inspecting containers, and subjecting craft to divinatory magic. So tight is this net that few smugglers have made much headway moving illicit goods into the city, and the githyanki make terrible examples of those who fail.

One smuggler, Taikus, knows a way and uses it to move slaves out of Tu'narath and to bring weapons and supplies into the city for the Separatists. If the adventurers are tipped off about his enterprise, it means his system has been compromised and the noose is ready to close about his neck.

The PCs likely come across Taikus by accident. If they choose to contact the smuggler, they find him at a warehouse on Pier 6, just outside the Citadel. The building stands between two empty docks. However, Tiamat's agents close in to kill the smuggler.

Tactical Encounter: Secret Way (see 63).

Adapting the Encounter: The adventurers might come across Taikus and his operation while in Tu'narath. Instead of granting access to a permanent portal, Taikus might arrange a meeting with the Separatists.

Consequences: Disrupting the smugglers' assistance to the Separatists is a major setback for the movement in Tu'narath. The PCs suffer 1 defeat when trying to enter Tu'narath.

THE SYMPATHIZER

Characters who successfully attain a victory on the "Finding Tu'narath" skill challenge (page 55) can have a meeting with Captain J'ladimir, the githyanki captain of Gith's Memory, a powerful astral carrack. J'ladimir was once a githyanki knight, but he resigned when Vlaakith was murdered by adventurers. He left his city to become a merchant, and he has sailed the Astral Sea these past two decades. Citadel Mercane is one his favorite ports.

J'ladimir is tall, thin, with angular features and a short, stubby nose. He has bright blue eyes and mottled skin. He wears chainmail armor and carries a distinctive silver longsword. Two decades as a merchant have done nothing to soften his disposition toward nongithyanki. He harbors a deep hatred for adventurers, blaming them, in part, for his queen's death. The only thing he hates more than nongithyanki is Zetch'r'r, for J'ladimir knows the blackguard was behind his lady's assassination.

J'ladimir hasn't officially joined the Separatists, but he's close. He resents Tiamat's surging influence, and his hate for the tyrant endures. Now that the Separatists claim to have Vlaakith CLVIII on their side, he's willing to help them.

In spite of his misgivings, he needs little convincing to help the PCs reach Tu'narath. The characters need only mention the Separatists, and he volunteers to ferry them to the city. If Mayhem is present, the characters don't even need to mention their mission. J'ladimir also supplies the adventurers with the proper documentation to enter the Merchant District. This is the extent to which J'ladimir will help. He offers nothing about the city, about the political developments, or anything else—such is his disdain for the adventurers. Passage on his ship is simple and uncomfortable, but it's passage all the same.

His ship leaves the day after the PCs meet with him, so the characters still have time to make purchases, perform rituals, and do anything else they need while at the Citadel.

IF ALL ELSE FAILS

It's unlikely but possible for the adventurers to utterly fail in finding a way to Tu'narath. If they exhaust every option and still haven't secured passage, let the PCs purchase an astral skiff for 13,000 gp. Mayhem can lead the characters to the city. Otherwise, the PCs will have to follow another ship—perhaps the Merciless. This should get the characters there, but it doesn't quite get them into the city. Mayhem can provide the characters with trade exemptions for the modest sum of 1 pp per character.

SAILING THE ASTRAL SEA

Adventurers who do everything right at Citadel Mercane gain passage on Gith's Memory and need only wait for the ship to arrive at Tu'narath. If the characters followed up the other leads and participated in those encounters, the trip to the githyanki city should be uneventful. However, skipping one or more of these side-treks puts the adventurers a little behind on experience points. You can catch the characters up by repurposing skipped encounters while the PCs are in Tu'narath, or you might run one or more of the following optional encounters.

GITHYANKI RAIDERS

Level 19 Encounter (12,000 XP)

5 githyanki dragonknights (page 68)

5 pact dragons (page 69)

A wing of dragonknights riding pact dragons patrol the Astral Sea to intercept explorers and plunder merchants not bearing trade exemptions.

INFERNAL ENVOYS

Level 19 Encounter (12,200 XP)

2 ice devils (Monster Manual, page 63)

7 legion devil veterans (Monster Manual, page 64)

1 war devil (Monster Manual, page 67)

A war devil in service to Glasya (archdevil and lord of the sixth layer of Nine Hells) crosses the Astral Sea bound for Tytherion, where it intends to meet with Tiamat to negotiate for another legion of abishai thralls. If the adventurers missed out on any treasure parcels, they can recover them from this entourage.

MALACHI'S REFUGEES

Level 19 Encounter (12,152 XP)

2 gibbering abominations (Monster Manual, page 126)

4 grimlock followers (Monster Manual, page 148)

1 mind flayer mastermind (Monster Manual, page 188)

Fleeing the upheaval in the natural world when the alienist Malachi ("Brink of Madness," DUNGEON Magazine #163) failed to create a stable portal to the Far Realm, this mind flayer mastermind and its followers ride on a makeshift chariot made from a massive statue's head pulled by two gibbering abominations.

PART TWO: TU'NARATH

Having crossed the Astral Sea's expanse by portal or by vessel, the adventurers find Tu'narath, the ancient githyanki city, lying before them. Never a welcoming place, Tu'narath is made even more uninviting by Tiamat's occupying force and its crushing, totalitarian regime. How the adventurers find the city depends on the methods used to reach it.

BY SHIP

Characters approaching Tu'narath must contend with the sentinels if they want to reach the city intact.

If the adventurers reach the city by way of a planar vessel, read:

Your vessel breaks through the shimmering astral essence and there, amid the sea of sparkling lights, floats Tu'narath. Citadels drift around the city, each a cluster of spurs, towers, and chains connecting these floating fortresses to smaller roosts. Dragons with riders soar through the firmament as massive astral warships perform training maneuvers over the city.

Beyond the traffic, and beyond the strongholds' net, is the city. Although bristling with towers and strongholds, wormed with roads, and spewing black plumes of smoke, its foundation is clear. The city grows like tumors all over a dead creature's petrified remains. What's clearly a head stands at one end. From its shoulders stretch six arms, each ending at steel docking towers crowded with ships. Structures armor the being's torso, extending down to what would have been its abdomen but is now a crumbling region dimpled with dark caverns and littered with debris.

THE CORDON

The githyanki are not about to let a band of adventurers enter the city. Not long after Tu'narath comes into view, a wing of dragonknights surrounds the vessel to inspect the cargo and ensure the ship has the trade exemption needed to dock at the stations. (Use the "Githyanki Raiders" encounter on page 37.)

Characters on board Gith's Memory have nothing to fear. Captain J'ladimir has documentation and presents it to the dragonknight when she comes aboard. J'ladimir is feared and respected enough that the githyanki don't search the vessel and, in fact, escort it the rest of the way to the docking stations.

Without J'ladimir, the PCs must fend for themselves. What sort of welcome the adventurers face depends on how they acquitted themselves in Citadel Mercane. Total the number of victories and defeats from any encounters as described under the "Consequences" entries. Characters receive no experience points for any of the skill challenges related to entering the city.

One or More Victories: The githyanki dragonknights are secret members of the Separatists. They make a great show of searching the ship and interrogating the adventurers, but ultimately, they allow the heroes to make the rest of the way to the Docking Stations without trouble. If Mayhem is not present, the githyanki also suggest the characters go to the Morningstar Inn to find "proper accommodations."

No Victories, No Defeats: The characters' ship is searched by two githyanki dragonknights, while the others position themselves around the PCs' vessel. If the characters picked up trade exemptions at Citadel Mercane, their ship is searched, but the PCs are eventually permitted into the city. If the characters didn't, they must succeed on a complexity 1 skill challenge

(4 successes before 3 failures) involving Bluff and Diplomacy skill checks against DC 22, or Intimidate checks against DC 27. A victory earns the PCs a trade exemption and passage into the city. Defeat sees the PCs taken to the Fortress of Three Sorrows (page 43) where they are to be incarcerated and eventually executed. The adventurers might resist capture as they like, but if they lose or go along with the githyanki, they are interred at the Fortress of Three Sorrows (page 43) where they should have a chance to escape, recover their gear, and rescue Vlaakith. Mayhem could prove a useful ally in the event that this happens.

If the characters defeat the dragonknights, the city will mobilize a response (use creatures from "Assaulting the Fortress" on page 68). The PCs might retreat, and might even return to Citadel Mercane to find another way into the city. A loss against the githyanki results in incarceration at the Fortress of Three Sorrows, as described above.

In any event, don't forget the PCs need to get into the city, so poor decisions should make it harder, but not impossible.

One Defeat: As above, but the skill challenge DCs increase by 5.

Two or More Defeats: The characters are automatically escorted to the Fortress of Three Sorrows as described above.

DOCKING STATIONS

Past the cordon, the PCs can disembark from their vessel at the docking stations rising up from the "arm" accessing the city's Merchant District. The docking stations are metal piers stabbing out from the arm. Each pier can hold up to eight ships. Here, the adventurers can see the city's diversity: Plenty of githyanki live and work here, but devils, maruts, dragonborn mercenaries, and all sorts of other creatures do so as well. The PCs are safe at the docking stations and can proceed into the Merchant District without trouble.

BY PORTAL

If the adventurers came up with another way to enter the city, they can bypass all the trouble with the cordon and arrive in a dim alley tucked between two tall towers in the Merchant District.

If the adventurers reach the city by portal, read:

The portal deposits you in a refuse-littered alley drenched in shadows. Ahead of you, the alley opens onto a crowded street filled with merchants and travelers alike. Behind you, the rough stone side street disappears as it makes its way deeper into the buildings scraping the shimmering sky.

The permanent teleportation circle on the alley's ground is hidden behind a permanent illusion masking the alley's entrance. Smugglers use the alley to move in and out of the city without attracting attention. The illusion masking the alley is identifiable as such with a successful DC 20 Arcana check. A few githyanki are aware of it, but they find it useful, so they have not yet destroyed it. This said, they monitor the portal, and the adventurers' sudden appearance sees a githyanki kill team descend on the alley after 5 rounds. If the characters linger this long, proceed with the following tactical encounter.

Tactical Encounter: Kill Squad (page 65).

Adaptation: If the kill squad doesn't arrive in time, or the PCs don't come to the city by way of portal, you can use this encounter at any point after the PCs arrive, but before Part Five.

CITY OVERVIEW

Tu'narath is a sprawling metropolis built atop the petrified remains of a dead god known only as the One in the Void. Much of Tu'narath remains as it always has, but it has not emerged from the tumultuous last decades unscathed.

Vlaakith's mad rituals sent shockwaves through the city, destroying Susurrus, the Palace of Whispers, and reducing the necropolis and the statue of Gith to rubble. Damage from this event can still be seen in adjoining military districts and the city has worked to rebuild.

The Merchant District, however, is more or less intact. Although overrun by Tiamat's agents and soldiers, the githyanki still do not allow nongithyanki who have no affiliation with the war effort to venture farther than the commercial quarter, and those who push into the neighboring districts find themselves beset by overwhelming numbers. Luckily, the Separatists operate in the Merchant District, blending in with the other merchants.

EXPLORING THE CITY

The characters are free to explore the Merchant District, but their purpose here is to contact the Separatists.

RUMORS IN TU'NARATH

The characters can learn more about current events in the city by making Streetwise checks.

DC Information
28	Emperor Zetch'r'r rules the city, and the githyanki of Tu'narath fight on Tiamat's behalf.
30	Zetch'r'r came to power after foreigners assassinated the Lich-Queen Vlaakith, and he has ruled for 25 years.
35	Many believe Zetch'r'r had a hand in Vlaakith's death and point to his close ties to Tiamat as further proof of his treachery. Not all are so willing to fight for Tiamat.
40	Vlaakith has returned and is allied with the Separatists. However, the emperor's warriors captured her and hold her someplace out of the city. If she were freed, she could rally the githyanki against Zetch'r'r's tyranny.

SHOPPING

The Merchant District has a robust market, and characters can purchase mundane and magic equipment up to their level. If the PCs didn't spend time properly outfitting themselves at Citadel Mercane, let them do so here.

TU'NARATH

Under Tiamat's heel, the former center of githyanki culture has now become a bastion of the Dark Lady's strength.

Population: 120,000; Githyanki are still the dominant people in Tu'narath, but they now share the city with Tiamat's legions. Unprecedented numbers of devils, dragonborn, dragonspawn, and other creatures have free rein to go where they please. Outside of these forces, visitors are still confined to the Merchant District, where a diverse population thrives.

Government: After foreigners assassinated Vlaakith CLVII, Emperor Zetch'r'r came to power. He rules by Tiamat's consent and is little more than a puppet. If he displeases Tiamat, his reign would come to an abrupt end.

Defenses: Most githyanki serve in the military with allegiance to a society found in the military districts. Military societies raise armies consisting of warriors, gish, and warlocks. Foremost of these warriors are the githyanki knights who ride dragons into battle. Numerous floating fortresses are arranged around the city, and each has a full company and two to four pact dragons to intercept foreign vessels coming too close to the city.

ENEMIES ON ALL SIDES

Although the Separatists took precautions when making contact with the Coalition, their efforts did not go undetected. Tiamat has spies everywhere, and her agents intercepted the message when they destroyed the githyanki waiting in Citadel Mercane. Still fearing an upset to her plans, Tiamat dispatched a favored servant to watch for the adventurers and intercept them before they make contact with the rebels. After the PCs enter the Merchant District, Tiamat's agents locate the PCs and attack.

Tactical Encounter: Blue Thunder (page 67).

In addition, Tiamat keeps four legions in the city to ensure her continued control. These mercenary forces are made up of dragonborn, humans, devils, abishai, and other creatures loyal to the Dark Lady. As powerful as they are, Tiamat knows they are only as strong as the dragons supporting them, and if the dragons quit the city, Tiamat's forces would surely follow.

Inns: The Morningstar Inn; Iron House; The Dragon's Den; others. The Morningstar Inn is the most expensive but most popular establishment in the Merchant District.

Taverns: The Winesink; Filthy Dredges; Nectar House; others.

Supplies: The Merchant District is the commercial center in the city and one can find just about anything they could want. Merchants sell from established shops, open-air markets, or carts along the streets. Businesses cluster together along streets set aside for trade. Kyndl Street, for example, offers alchemical supplies, poisons, and ritual ingredients.

Temples: For as long as Tu'narath has stood, it has never housed an official temple. With Zetch'r'r's reign, the city now has a grotesque temple dedicated to Tiamat that also serves as the emperor's palace.

CONTACT, FINALLY

The recent setbacks to the Separatists' efforts have forced them into hiding, but when the PCs destroy the bluespawn godslayer in "Blue Thunder," word spreads and agents set out to find the PCs. Mayhem knows exactly where the rebels hide and can lead the PCs to them if he is still in the party's company and if he's asked. Otherwise, just have a Separatist agent contact the PCs.

The crowds fill the streets in a seething mass. Finding the Separatists here is tantamount to finding courage in a kobold tribe. Yet even as this realization sinks in, you spy a hooded githyanki moving through the crowds, scanning for something. His eyes fall on you, linger for a moment, and then he moves away. It seems he wants you to follow.

The adventurers can trace the githyanki's route through the streets to a building not far from the docking towers.

The githyanki ducks into a two-story building constructed from stone, encrusted with leering gargoyles, and supported by flying buttresses. No sign hangs above the door, but the raucous laughter and clinking glass sounding from within indicate it's an inn or tavern or both.

The building is the Morningstar Inn, an infamous tavern with rooms to rent upstairs. It has the look of a gothic cathedral, so it blends in with the other buildings. Tall windows covered by rich curtains offer access into guest rooms on both floors. Double doors on one side lead into the common room, while another set offers discrete access to the private rooms. The latter doors are locked (DC 30 Thievery or DC 35 Strength to open) and fooling around with the doors causes Gharvag (the githyanki Separatist agent) to come around to bring the PCs inside to the common room.

The bawdy sounds you heard on the street are absent inside the large common room. An octagonal bar, painted black, commands the view and behind it stands an attractive tiefling in a revealing red dress. She smiles. The tables around the bar are empty except for one. There, you spot the githyanki you spied on the streets. He invites you to sit with a gesture.

The tiefling is Rhapsody, the owner and member of the Separatists. In the years since Zetch'r'r came to power, Rhapsody opened her doors to the rebels to serve as a base and haven. The place still operates as a tavern, but only Separatists come here.

The githyanki is Gharvag, a Separatist agent and contact for the adventurers. He has information useful to the PCs, but also plenty of bad news about what needs to be done before they have a chance to get the negotiations underway.

PLANS FOILED?

Although he never expected to see the adventurers here, their appearance confirms suspicions that the envoys the Separatists sent are now dead. Gharvag is Vlaakith's right-hand man, but he has little authority. Like his mistress, he wants an alliance, but the emperor's secret police and oppressive tactics have driven the organization into hiding.

Gharvag can supply the PCs with missing information, and he answers the following questions.

What do you think happened to the envoys?

The emperor's agents must have intercepted our communications. Zetch'r'r's secret police have been rounding up sympathizers all over the city, forcing the leaders to lay low. We've been waiting for word from the envoys, and this explains the silence.

We're here. Let's talk.

I'm afraid you've come a long way for nothing. Our leader has been captured and is held at a flying fortress outside of the city. We haven't mounted a rescue mission since it would expose more of us to Zetch'r'r's reprisals.

While Vlaakith lies in chains, there can be no alliance. Should she become free, however . . .

Why do you need her?

Our leader is critical to our success, for she is none other than Vlaakith. She wants the gith peoples reunited and has little use for the treacherous goddess and her draconic legions.

Wasn't Vlaakith killed?

Yes, Vlaakith CLVII was destroyed around 25 years ago. I might not agree with the methods used to remove her from power, but she was mad. Had she succeeded in her designs, it would have meant the end for all of us. Our Vlaakith is different. Gone are the deific ambitions, and in their place is a renewed commitment to our glorious crusade against the mind flayers.

If we get her out, can we get this alliance hammered out?

I am certain Vlaakith's freedom will bring the rebels out from hiding, but even if you reach an agreement, I can't see how we can follow through on any promises. Zetch'r'r has the dragons on his side. As long as he carries the scepter of Ephelomon, the dragons will do as he says. Even with all our numbers, I'm not sure we can stand against such powerful enemies.

RHAPSODY

If the characters blow it with Gharvag, Rhapsody can step in to calm the githyanki down and get the PCs back on track. She tells Gharvag that the PCs are their best hope at getting Vlaakith back and saying to him, "If you want them out of the war, you'd best get over your prejudices and see the allies standing in front of you."

CONCLUSIONS

No negotiations are going to happen while Vlaakith is imprisoned. Since Gharvag and the rest of the Separatists are unable or unwilling to free her, it falls to the adventurers to free her. Assuming the PCs suggest this course of action, Gharvag tells the characters she's in the Fortress of Three Sorrows, the stronghold in sight of the Chromatic Bastion, the seat of Zetch'r'r's power. If the characters go this route, proceed with Part Three.

Depending on how the conversation goes, the adventurers might gain a little insight into what lays ahead. Even if Vlaakith is freed, she probably will not follow through on any negotiations while the emperor sits on the throne. With this in mind, the PCs might get it into their heads to strike at Zetch'r'r first. This is fine. With Zetch'r'r dead, the githyanki won't rally behind anyone until Vlaakith presents herself and reveals she is in fact Gith reborn. This along with the destruction of the scepter of Ephelomon wrests the city from Tiamat's clutches. Go to Part Five if the characters are gunning for the emperor.

Regardless of which way the PCs go, if the PCs help, Gharvag gives them treasure parcel 7. Rhapsody hands the characters parcel 4 and says, "I think you can use this more than I can right now."

Ceilings: Except where indicated otherwise, ceilings are 20 feet tall.

Doors: Except for the cells, no doors are locked in the complex. Doors open into rooms unless noted otherwise. A door that joins two rooms opens into the larger room

Illumination: Everburning torches fill all rooms with bright light.

Stairs: Stairs are made from stone, and squares containing stairs count as difficult terrain while climbing them.

FORTRESS OF THREE SORROWS OVERVIEW

Like most other floating fortresses, the Fortress of Three Sorrows is a brooding structure to which there are tethered three smaller towers raised atop astral detritus. The fortress sits on top of a massive statue's head, tilted at a forty-five-degree angle, as if it was a tumor growing out from the statue's ear. The statue's features are that of a screaming human wearing an open-faced helm.

A. SATELLITE TOWERS

Tethered by chains forged from astral driftmetal to the fortress are three satellite towers perched atop rocky bergs. The bergs float on the astral horizon, and the towers rise 20 feet above them.

B. MAIN TOWER

The central tower grants access to the fortress's interior. When under attack, the githyanki captain commands its forces from this location.

C. BALLISTA PLATFORMS

The Main Tower sports four exposed staircases that each descend to a ballista platform. There, crews man these powerful siege engines and hurl death at enemies as they approach.

D. STATUE'S HEAD

The Fortress of Three Sorrows stands atop an ancient statue's decapitated head. The head floats on the astral horizon, and three chains spill from its tear duct to the satellite towers, giving the fortress its appropriate name.

E. MAW

The githyanki excavated the statue's mouth to serve as a hangar for two astral interceptors (see page 46) and two pact dragons.

0. ASSAULT ON THE FORTRESS

Unless the PCs devise some way to sneak into the Fortress of Three Sorrows, they face stiff resistance when they descend on the stronghold.

Tactical Encounter: Assaulting the Fortress (page 68).

Adapting the Encounter: If the PCs sneak into the stronghold and thus bypass its defenses, consider denying Vlaakith the ability to perform the Linked Portal ritual. The adventurers have to escape the fortress by some other means. The "Into the Maw" tactical encounter on page 74 covers slipping out of the fortress by stealing an astral interceptor (see page 46).

1. PRISON LEVEL

The trapdoor on the rooftop opens onto an iron ladder that descends 30 feet to the floor below. The guardroom at the center is where the githyanki captain and soldiers meet with visitors and attend to general business. A narrow corridor rings the guardroom and grants access to several cells and also the barracks. One can descend to the armory below by way of a cramped spiral staircase in the center of the guardroom.

Tactical Encounter: Desperate Defenders (page 70).

2. ARMORY LEVEL

This level takes its name, obviously, from the armories and storerooms that hold weapons, armor, and foodstuffs. As well, this level holds a training facility where githyanki warriors can spar and hone their techniques. Currently, the training room is where the githyanki hold Vlaakith, keeping her distanced from other warriors lest she corrupt them with her "lies."

The staircase descends from the prison level and continues to the hangar in the statue's maw.

When Gith escaped the Nine Hells, Dispater was none too pleased. The archdevil dispatched his aspect and bodyguards to Tu'narath to see what had happened and there discovered what was unfolding in the city. The aspect knew Gith would not give up her people, so Dispater has spent several weeks searching for her. The appearance of another Vlaakith was too obvious given that her predecessor had no heirs, so the aspect has traveled to the Fortress of Three Sorrows to "interview" the prisoner and confirm his suspicions.

Tactical Encounter: Jailbreak (page 72).

Armory: This room contains shelves loaded with mundane crossbow bolts, armor, and silvered weaponry.

Storerooms: Two storerooms hold foodstuffs, water, and other mundane supplies.

VLAAKITH CLVIII

Defeating the aspect and the other creatures in this room lets the PCs focus on freeing Vlaakith from her prison. She can talk, but she cannot move. She doesn't say anything right off since she's not entirely sure who the PCs are and what they intend. She answers any questions the PCs put to her. What follows are likely questions and typical answers. Vlaakith doesn't have time to waste telling lies, so she answers to the best of her knowledge and truthfully, only shading where absolutely necessary.

So, who are you?

I am Vlaakith, the one hundred fifty-eighth of the name, and Tu'narath's rightful queen.

What are you doing here?

The so-called emperor's cronies attacked my quarters in the city and killed my guards. I fought, but they overpowered me.

Who the devil was that fellow you were talking to?

Dispater. Actually, it was his shadow, an aspect.

What was he doing here?

He believes I am not who I say I am.

Who does he think you are?

Gith.

Gith?

Gith led the uprising that toppled the illithid empire and freed her peoples from a thousand years spent in chains. Gith vanished soon after her people settled in the Astral Sea, and many believe she traded her soul to forge the pact between the scions of Ephelomon and the githyanki. According to legend, she was held in the Nine Hells, bound to an archdevil's will.

So if that was Dispater and he's looking for Gith, doesn't this mean Gith has escaped?

It would seem so.

If Gith has escaped, that means the pact is broken, right?

Again, you seem to have the right of it.

So, are you Gith?

Would it change matters if I was? You want the githyanki out of the war. I can make this happen, but only if you release me.

Vlaakith will not negotiate while she's a prisoner. Gith has been around for a while and is not about to be intimidated into making a bargain. Furthermore, it's not Gith the PCs have to convince: the supreme commanders who make up the Separatists need to be convinced to break with Tiamat for good before the githyanki will end hostilities.

Pitfalls: The adventure expects the PCs to free Vlaakith, but the players might have other ideas. Abandoning Vlaakith to whatever fate is in store for her does not in fact contain Gith. She can abandon the flesh at any time and find a new host elsewhere. The only reason she hasn't yet is because she's established her new identity, and starting over again would be an annoying setback. As a consequence, the characters will never get the chance to negotiate with the Separatists to extract them from Tiamat's war. Destroying Zetch'r'r and revealing the broken pact will more or less remove the githyanki as a threat, but when the githyanki reorganize, the PCs' world is certain to be their first target.

The worst thing the characters can do is to attack Vlaakith. She might not yet be at full strength, but her power rivals that of an archdevil, and she should prove a deadly enemy, far stronger than what the PCs could hope to face at their level. Vlaakith isn't interested in slaughtering the party, and so she takes them all alive to use later against Zetch'r'r.

3. HANGAR

The spiral stairs end at the hangar. The githyanki keep their pact dragon steeds, the two astral interceptors, replacement parts, and food for the mounts here.

Astral Interceptor
Gargantuan vehicle (astral skiff)
HP 250	Space 2 squares by 4 squares
Cost 13,000 gp
AC 4; Fortitude 20, Reflex 2
Speed fly 12 (hover), overland flight 15
Pilot
The pilot must stand at a control wheel, typically at the rear of the astral interceptor .
Crew
In addition to the pilot, an astral interceptor requires a crew of three, all of whom use a standard action each round to control the skiff. Reduce the skiff's fly speed by 4 squares for each missing crewmember. At fly speed 0, the astral interceptor sails out of control.
Load
Ten Medium creatures; one ton of cargo
Out of Control
An out-of-control astral interceptor moves forward at half speed (not including any modifiers for its astral sails).
Astral Attunement
The astral interceptor functions only in the Astral Sea.
Fragile Propulsion
For every 25 damage the astral interceptor takes, its speed is reduced by 2 squares. At fly speed 0, the ship comes to a stop.

The following tactical encounter occurs only if the PCs skipped "Assaulting the Fortress."

ESCAPING THE FORTRESS

After rescuing the prisoner, the PCs can escape by way of the Linked Portal ritual, fly out in a stolen astral vessel, or by some other means. With Vlaakith in tow, the adventurers need to return to the city and get things rolling, so let just about any plan work. If the PCs are stumped, have an NPC ally pick them up and ferry them back.

Once back in the city, the characters can lay low at the Morningstar Inn. Rhapsody has enough hidey-holes to allow the entire party to disappear for as long as they need. There's not much time, however, for the attack did not go unnoticed and the emperor's wrath unleashes a storm like Tu'narath has never before seen.

PART FOUR: NEGOTIATIONS

The emperor responds to Vlaakith's escape by closing off the city. Those floating fortress commanders who failed to stop the adventurers and didn't have the good sense to flee are summarily executed, and he installs new commanders loyal to himself and Tiamat in their place, many of which are not even githyanki. Military societies loyal to his throne mobilize and lay siege to those of uncertain reliability, while a full legion with red dragon support sweeps through the Merchant District searching for Vlaakith and her liberators.

As casualties mount, confidence in the emperor falters. Division and unrest spread across the city. Yet for all the dissatisfaction, none seem willing to rise up against Zetch'r'r as long as he has Tiamat's support. If they could remove Zetch'r'r and break his pact with the red dragons, the people would rise up and wrest the city free from Tiamat's grip.

The adventurers have proved their courage, their competence, and their ambition. In Vlaakith's eyes, they are the ones the movement needs to spark the revolution. Shortly after the characters return to the city (after they've had a chance to take an extended rest), Vlaakith calls the Separatists' leaders to a meeting. The PCs, representing the Coalition, can bargain with the leadership to forge an alliance and convince them to withdraw from Tiamat's unholy war.

Skill Challenge: A Turning Point (page 76).

MAYHEM'S EXIT

After the negotiation, Mayhem decides Tu'narath is too dangerous a place to linger and chooses this time to make his exit. He bids the characters farewell and ducks out, vanishing into the city. Mayhem is unlikely to return, but if the characters ever find themselves in Citadel Mercane, they might have an ally or an enemy there depending on how they treated him.

PART FIVE: WAR FOR TU'NARATH

Upon securing the agreement with the githyanki separatists under Vlaakith's command, the only thing left for the adventurers to do is to defeat Emperor Zetch'r'r. The emperor's forces are spread across the city, searching for Vlaakith, so the PCs need only deal with those left guarding Zetch'r'r's throne. While the PCs attack the emperor's palace, the Separatist leaders under Vlaakith's command spark the uprising, leading strikes against Tiamat's command centers and destroying those who have betrayed them. The Separatists are strong enough to fight for a time, but they need to rouse the rest of the city to their cause, something that can be achieved only by destroying the emperor.

The chaos and infighting wracking the city covers the PCs' approach to the bastion, so aside from a few incidental encounters (with combats of your design if the adventurers are not yet 20th level), they enter the shattered remnants of the Queen's District.

When the PCs enter, read:

A crumbling, mazelike necropolis of tombs and shattered statues spreads out in all directions. Paths wind through the wreckage and lead up to a towering cathedral wrought from black stone and fitted with windows set with multicolored glass. Before it stands the remains of an obsidian statue. Only two glossy black legs remain.

THE CHROMATIC BASTION

Zetch'r'r rules Tu'narath from the Chromatic Bastion, an obscene cathedral built to honor Tiamat's role in his victory over his rivals. Built atop the ruins of the Lich Queen's palace, it symbolizes the end of Vlaakith's corruption and the githyanki's strengthened bonds to the Dark Lady of Avarice. It is a macabre place, filled with shadowy horrors and protected by githyanki, dragons, and a menagerie of terrible monsters.

FEATURES OF THE CHROMATIC BASTION

The following features are common throughout the bastion unless otherwise mentioned in the text.

Illumination: Rooms are bright, lit by everburning torches set in iron sconces every 5 squares or so.

Level 2

Doors: Iron doors are unlocked. Doors open into rooms unless noted otherwise. A door that joins two rooms opens into the larger room.

Combat: Don't feel confined by the maps presented in the tactical encounters. Combats can and should spill over into adjoining rooms. Avoid letting battles trigger additional encounters by having enemies push the PCs back the way they came.

EXTENDED RESTS

The Chromatic Bastion offers few opportunities for the adventurers to take extended rests. The PCs simply don't have 6 hours to spend recouping while their allies fight for the city's future on the streets beyond. Not only do the PCs give Zetch'r'r the time he needs to crush the uprising but also an extended rest gives the emperor a chance to recall his troops and stiffen his defenses.

Few adventuring parties have the resources and wherewithal to endure eight encounters in a row, so the Chromatic Bastion provides one location to help the PCs regain healing surges and daily powers without breaking the suspension of disbelief with a full-blown extended rest. If the PCs attempt an extended rest anyway, feel free to hit them with improvised encounters featuring githyanki minions to make the rest difficult.

0. THE NECROPOLIS

The adventurers must pass through the Necropolis to reach the Chromatic Bastion. Fallen heroes and notable githyanki were accorded the special honor of being interred in vaults within sight of the Palace of Whispers. Few, though, rested easy in their tombs, and those cursed with unlife wander the necropolis still.

Tactical Encounter: Stillness Broken (page 77).

1. SHATTERED GITH

Gith's statue, standing at the highest point in the Queen's District, has long stood as a reminder of the legendary hero's sacrifice and as an inspiration to continue to fight in her name. Vlaakith CLVII's aborted attempt to seize the divine spark within the One in the Void caused shockwaves to wash across the district, toppling Gith's intimidating statue and the Old Palace of Whispers on which the Chromatic Bastion now stands.

The brooding cathedral looms before you, an ugly thing that is squat and unadorned aside from the rainbow glass plates set around the ornately carved iron doors. Before the structure stand the remains of a once-impressive statue carved from solid obsidian. Only the legs, part of the waist, and sword blade remain, but you can tell it depicted a female warrior. Black dust and broken statuary litter the ground all around the statue, and rubble from an older structure covers the cathedral's grounds.

2. ANTECHAMBER

Adventurers destroyed Vlaakith CLVII and sundered her phylactery, but Zetch'r'r' preserved the Lich-Queen's essence in her spine and bound her to his service with terrible oaths. To show his scorn for his predecessor, he reduced her to a common sentinel.

Tactical Encounter: Evil's Backbone (page 79).

3. GALLERY OF FLAME

The gallery of flame honors Tiamat in her red dragon aspect, and those who seek the fires of her greed might experience unspeakable desires in this fiery chamber.

Tactical Encounter: Red Sentinels (page 81).

4. VESTRY

Zetch'r'r and his attendant priests use this chamber to don their priestly vestments when worshiping at one of the two altars.

Shelves cover the walls in this chamber, and each is laden with heavy ceremonial robes woven from brass thread.

An iron door stands closed on the opposite wall. Ice rimes its surface.

5. GALLERY OF ICE

The door to this room is frozen shut and requires a DC 22 Strength check to open.

Although built to honor the Chromatic Dragon in her white dragon aspect, the emperor uses this chamber to store dragon carcasses for later use in Tiamat's war. Attending the remains are devils suited for the gallery's chilly environs.

Tactical Encounter: The Freezer (page 82).

6. HALL OF SKULLS

This chamber houses the mind flayer skulls recovered from the old Palace of Whispers. Since Zetch'r'r came to power, precious few skulls have been added.

Skulls, arranged in stacks that reach the ceiling, extend along the walls to the chamber's end. Most are damaged in some way or another, and all are of an alien shape.

A character that succeeds on a DC 22 Dungeoneering check recognizes the skulls as belonging to mind flayers.

7. SHRINE OF QUEENS

Although Zetch'r'r has nothing but scorn for the Lich-Queen, he has not fallen so far as to forget his heritage. This room honors the long line of queens who preceded the emperor.

Against the far wall stands a short porphyry altar holding a statuette of a proud githyanki woman wearing a crown. Statues of stern githyanki warriors stand in each corner, all eyes on the altar. Something about this room fills you with ease, making your mission and fears seem no longer pressing.

The sensations the PCs feel come from the ghosts of Vlaakith that haunt this chamber. They approve of the adventurers' mission. Not enough of them remain to manifest themselves in any way more than just a feeling. Characters can safely take an extended rest in this room.

Altar: Inspecting the altar and succeeding on a DC 27 Perception check reveals a hidden panel. Inside is a magnificently carved wooden box. Opening the box reveals a pulsing black heart. The box is Vlaakith CLVII's phylactery, and if the characters defeated her in "Evil's Backbone," she reforms in this room after the requisite time has passed. Destroying the box (AC 10, Fortitude 5, Reflex 10; 5 hp) prevents Vlaakith from reforming and destroys her for good. A DC 27 Religion check identifies the box as being a phylactery.

If the characters take the box with them, Vlaakith reappears in a space adjacent to the box's carrier after the requisite number of days has passed and attacks at once.

8. GALLERY OF DECAY

Zetch'r'r built this chamber to honor Tiamat in her black dragon aspect. Currently, though, the emperor sets aside this chamber to hold curiosities recovered during the war. Since these "items of interest" are in fact dangerous creatures, the emperor set mercenaries to guard them.

Tactical Encounter: Curiosities (page 84).

9. GALLERY OF DEATH

This chamber honors Tiamat in her green dragon aspect and sports a beautiful idol of the goddess in emerald. Since this chamber grants access to Zetch'r'r's private quarters, he places tough guards to ensure he is not disturbed.

Tactical Encounter: Emerald Statue (page 86).

10. GUARD POST

Although Zetch'r'r commits his forces to crushing the Separatists, he keeps a small force of githyanki here as insurance. Guards positioned here listen for sounds of combat with the dragons in room 3 and alert their cohorts in room 11 to make ready for a fight.

Tactical Encounter: Those Who Are About to Die (page 88).

11. BARRACKS

Off-duty githyanki spend their time in these chambers. Each room consists of two or more bunk beds and a small table with a basin and water. The central rooms are residences for the gish'saraths (githyanki swordmasters).

Tactical Encounter: Those Who Are About to Die (page 88).

12. HALL OF HEROES

To promote loyalty among his warriors, the emperor had this room covered in bas-relief carvings depicting githwarriors battling githzerai, mind flayers, and slaads. When the Chromatic Temple comes under attack, the githyanki move to make a stand in this chamber.

Tactical Encounter: Those Who Are About to Die (page 88).

13. TRAINING FACILITIES

The githyanki use this bare room to spar and perform weapon maneuvers. The walls hold weapon racks, and the floor is broken up into fighting rings. Githwarriors are on guard here should the Chromatic Bastion come under attack.

Tactical Encounter: Those Who Are About to Die (page 88).

14. GALLERY OF TEMPESTS

This room celebrates Tiamat in her blue dragon aspect. This room is also where the emperor passes judgment on those who disappoint him. He executes the disloyal and inept and discards their corpses in a charnel pit below.

Tactical Encounter: Vicious Storm (page 89).

15. THE EMPEROR'S REDOUBT

The emperor claims the tower at the cathedral's rear. The tower has three levels, all of which are open so the emperor can see all levels at once. The tower is open at the top, and the emperor frequently comes and goes by this way.

Tactical Encounter: The Emperor's Redoubt (page 91).

CONCLUDING THE ADVENTURE

When the characters defeat Zetch'r'r and his allies, an astral skiff descends through the roof and settles on the second floor. Vlaakith and several githyanki knights exit through the hatch. Vlaakith congratulates the adventurers on their victory and then starts looking for the scepter of Ephelomon. If the scepter was destroyed, she gathers the pieces. Otherwise, she asks the PCs for it. She then makes ready to leave, saying, "It's time to finish this." She then boards the astral skiff again. The characters can join her if they wish.

Vlaakith and her retinue head for the dragon caves at the opposite side of the city. Through the windows, the characters can see Tu'narath in flames, and fighting still rages in pockets. Not long after, the skiff descends and lands on a large floating rock amid the debris held by the red dragons. There, Vlaakith steps out and waits.

Moments later, an elder red dragon emerges from a cave followed by four more dragons of similar size. Before they have a chance to breathe, Vlaakith raises her hands to show them the scepter. She says the following:

“Children of Ephelomon, the pact is ended and your worthy service is no longer required.”

If not already broken, she shatters the relic with a telekinetic attack. Otherwise, she drops the pieces to the ground.

The elder red dragon’s eyes narrow for a moment and then it says, “You have been suitable partners these long years. It would be a waste to see you destroyed. We shall leave, but know this: When we next meet, it shall be as enemies.” The elder dragon roars and lifts off, and the other dragons follow its lead. All across the shattered expanse, more dragons leave their caves, some carrying blackened eggs, others spitting fire, piercing the air with their screams. As dragons abandon the city in scores, the few remaining dragons fighting the Separatists take note and drop their riders to the city streets below before following their kin. Within minutes, the dragons vanish into the shimmering void, and the city is once more under githyanki control.

Vlaakith honors whatever agreements she made with the adventurers and stakes no claim to any treasures they extracted from the Chromatic Bastion. The characters are free to stay in the city for as long as they wish, but they will likely wish to return to the Coalition to report their success, and Vlaakith gladly has her servants open a portal to the natural world to facilitate the adventurers’ return.

If the characters forged a short-term alliance, two githyanki generals accompany them to the natural world to work with the Coalition leaders to lend their service in the coming fight against Tiamat’s armies. Otherwise, Vlaakith takes command of Tu’narath. She has the Chromatic Bastion razed, and she builds a new structure amid the red dragon caves as a sign of githyanki independence. Her first order of business after securing the city is to extend a hand of peace to the githzerai cousins. It has been too long, and old grudges have weakened her people. Those githzerai who accept the proffered peace eventually make the journey from the Elemental Chaos to find new lives amid their age-old enemies. A reunited people, they surrender their old identities of githyanki or githzerai and embrace a new culture as the gith.

Will Vlaakith restart the Eternal Crusade? Will she become a new threat against the mortal world, or will she leave it be as she scours other worlds for the hated illithid infestation? Or does she have some other design? The gith’s fate is in your hands.

APPENDIX: VEHICLES SUMMARY

Vehicles are objects with special statistics, some of which are similar to those possessed by creatures. Unless otherwise mentioned, use the rules governing objects as described in the Dungeon Master’s Guide. The following guidelines include information that applies to vehicles used in this adventure. For the full rules, see Adventurer’s Vault, pages 14–17.

Size: Vehicles have sizes just like creatures.

Hit Points: A vehicle reduced to 0 hit points is destroyed, and creatures on board are knocked prone in their squares. The vehicle’s wreckage occupies its space and counts as difficult terrain.

Space: Vehicles occupy all the space within its listed dimensions. Vehicles cannot squeeze.

Defenses: Like all objects, vehicles have an Armor Class, a Fortitude defense, and a Reflex defense. They do not have a Will defense.

Speed: A vehicle’s speed determines how far it travels when a driver or pilot uses a move action. Using 2 move actions allows the vehicle to move twice its speed.

Pilot and Crew: Vehicles require a character to control it and a crew to help. Pilots usually operate the vehicle from the rear so when placing the vehicle on the map, decide which is the front and which is the rear.

A vehicle needs a pilot. Without one, the vehicle goes out of control and the statistics block describes what happens. Only one character can control a vehicle during a round, though any number of characters can attempt to take control until one is successful. A character can yield control to another character as a free action, but the character assuming control of the vehicle (also a free action) can take no other action with the vehicle during that turn. If a character does not move into the pilot position and assume control when it's yielded, the vehicle might go out of control unless some other character takes control.

Initiative: A vehicle never rolls for initiative and acts on the turn of the creature controlling it. If the vehicle is out-of-control, the vehicle's effective initiative check result is 1 lower than the last creature in the initiative order. For multiple out-of-control vehicles, the vehicles act in order of which has been out of control the longest.

Opportunity Attacks: A vehicle's movement does not provoke opportunity attacks against the vehicle or creature(s) occupying it. Creatures moving within still provoke opportunity attacks from other creatures in the same vehicle, as normal.

General Conditions: Vehicles can be attacked just like other objects. Some conditions have special rules (see below). If an effect allows a saving throw to end a condition, a vehicle makes one at the end of its controller's turn (or at the end of the vehicle's turn if out of control). A pilot can use a move action to allow a vehicle to make an additional saving throw during his or her turn.

Immobilized: An immobilized vehicle cannot move except by a pull, a push, or a slide.

Prone: A vehicle that would be knocked prone instead takes 1d10 damage and is slowed (see below) until the end of the next round.

Restrained: A restrained vehicle is immobilized and cannot be forced to move by a pull, a push, or a slide effect. If the restrained condition is ended by the escape action, the vehicle uses the pilot's relevant skill modifier.

Slowed: The vehicle's speed is reduced to 2, as normal.

Out of Control: A pilot must use specific actions to steer, move, or stop a vehicle. In any round in which no character uses actions to control the vehicle, a vehicle is out of control (see statistics block).

Crashing and Ramming: If a vehicle tries to move into a space occupied by an object, a creature, or another vehicle, it crashes. The vehicle and whatever hits it take 1d10 damage per square the vehicle moved in its previous turn. Creatures on board (and those on board the object it hits) take half damage.

If the target of the crash is more than one size category smaller than the out-of-control vehicle, the vehicle continues to move regardless of how much damage it dealt during the crash. The space the target occupies is treated as difficult terrain for the vehicle's movement.

Against targets of equal or greater size, the vehicle continues to move only if the target is destroyed. If not destroyed, the vehicle's move ends immediately.

Turning and Heading: Every vehicle has a heading—the direction it currently moves. To track a vehicle's heading, place a token along the front edge of the vehicle's space on the battle grid. When a vehicle moves, uses the marker to count off squares in the direction the vehicle is moving, and then move the vehicle counter or miniature to catch up.

Drive: Move Action. Move the vehicle a distance up to its speed. When you move the vehicle, it must move in the direction of its heading marker. The vehicle can move directly forward or it can move along either forward diagonal adjacent to its heading marker. It cannot move in other directions without making a turn. A vehicle's movement does not provoke opportunity attacks against the vehicle or the creatures on it. Terrain affects a vehicle in the same way that it affects creatures.

Turn: Move Action. Move the vehicle a distance equal to half its speed. When you move the vehicle, it must move in the direction of its heading marker. The vehicle can move directly forward or it can move along either forward diagonal adjacent to its heading marker. At any point during the vehicle's movement, move its heading marker from its current position to either side of the vehicle. Reorient the vehicle's counter or miniature accordingly at the end of the move. Otherwise, this action follows the rules for the drive action (above).

Stop: Move Action. Move the vehicle forward a number of squares equal to the distance it moved in the previous round. At the end of the move, the vehicle is motionless. A vehicle begins moving again when the pilot uses the drive action. A stopped vehicle does not go out of control while motionless unless otherwise noted in its description. The vehicles' heading marker remains in place. If and when the vehicle moves again, it must initially move in this direction.

MAYHEM'S FLIGHT

Encounter Level 18 (10,200 XP)

SETUP

2 blood fiends (B)

Mayhem (M)

Mayhem is confronted by two ravenous blood fiends. The abominations happily engage anyone that interferes.

The path emerges from the petrified forest and climbs to a smoking cleft in the mountainside. Standing on the road, and looking quite terrified, is a tall blue-skinned humanoid dressed in fine robes. Two muscular four-armed humanoids with blood red skin and long claws and fangs threaten the traveler from mountain ledges.

TACTICS

The blood fiends focus their attacks on Mayhem until the PCs join the combat. One closes to use terror gaze, while the second moves in to make an attack with its claws, leaping from a ledge to put itself between the PCs and their prey. If the characters attack, both blood fiends abandon Mayhem and use terror gaze to pin down their enemies and then close to savage them with their claws. Once they bloody an enemy, they go for the kill, using their bloodthirsty bite attacks.

Mayhem plays the part of the hapless victim for 1 round. If the PCs have yet to help him by the start of the second round, the next time he's hit by an attack, he uses vanish to cover his retreat. If prevented, he uses mind scramble against a blood fiend and tries to withdraw to the cleft. He flees if he's bloodied.

FEATURES OF THE AREA

Cliffs: Climbing up or down the rock faces requires a DC 14 Athletics check. A fall from the cliff below the path causes the character to roll down the mountain side, moving 1d20 squares and taking 1d10 damage for every 2 squares moved before coming to a stop.

Vents: Fissures in the mountain near the cleft (marked V1, V2, V3, and V4 on the map) occasionally burst hot, poisonous steam. On initiative count 10, roll 1d4 to determine which vent attacks.

☞ Vented Steam ♦ Fire, Poison

Close blast 3; +21 vs. Reflex; 1d10 + 6 fire damage, and the target takes ongoing 10 fire and poison damage (save ends).

Sulfurous Smoke: All spaces adjacent to the cleft are lightly obscured, while spaces in the cloud or in the cleft are heavily obscured.

FINDING TU'NARATH

Encounter Level 19 (12,000 XP)

SETUP

To secure a route to the githyanki city, the PCs must negotiate Citadel Mercane for leads. You should run this skill challenge as the adventurers explore and investigate the Bazaar. This skill challenge is unusual in that even failed checks can reveal routes to Tu'narath. These options are more dangerous and risk much, but they are as viable as getting a victory with the skill challenge. Many failures, as shown below, include links to side-treks. If characters follow-up on these, turn to the indicated page for details on what happens.

Finding Tu'narath Skill Challenge

Level 19
XP 12,000

The air hums with conversation, and in the crowds you see any number of useful types who might aid you in your mission.

The PCs listen and interact with locals to discover possible routes to Tu'narath. This skill challenge takes at least 6 hours.

Complexity

5 (12 successes before 3 failures).

Primary Skills

Bluff, Diplomacy, Endurance, History, Insight, Intimidate.

Other Skills

Streetwise.

Victory

The characters arrange a meeting with Captain J'ladimir, a Separatist sympathizer. He stands as the best and most certain route to Tu'narath. Proceed to "The Sympathizer" on page 36.

Defeat

If the characters haven't yet found a way to reach Tu'narath by one of the challenge's failures, they must begin the skill challenge again.

Special

If the PCs rescued and befriended Mayhem, they gain a +2 bonus to all skill checks related to the skill challenge.

Bluff DC 22

The PCs adopt cover stories and use them to find a way to the githyanki city.

Requires a successful Streetwise check.

The first failure turns up a name for someone who might help: Scaramandar. The failed check opens up the advanced Streetwise 1 option. The PCs cannot make any more Bluff checks until they succeed on another Streetwise check.

Diplomacy DC 22

The adventurers negotiate for passage, hinting at their mission and seeking sympathizers.

The PCs cannot make any more Diplomacy checks until they get another success with Streetwise.

Endurance DC 22 (4 successes maximum; see below)

The PCs spend time carousing in the hopes loose lips might reveal a clue.

On a failed check, a nearby barfly suggests the characters should just steal a ship. The failed check opens up the advanced Streetwise 2 check.

History DC 27

The PCs recall and mention a particularly bloodthirsty githyanki raid so that they can attempt to weaken bonds of loyalty or foment feelings of vengeance in people around them. A successful check can negate one failure instead of granting a success.

Intimidate DC 22

The PCs use threats to pressure locals to cough up a way to the city.

If failed, in addition to counting as a failure, the first failed check reveals a name of someone who might help. Taikus, a githzerai black marketer, sometimes smuggles goods into Tu'narath. This failure opens up advanced Streetwise 3. The PCs cannot make any more Intimidate checks until they succeed on another Streetwise check.

Streetwise DC 22

The PCs explore the Citadel, listening to rumors, asking questions, and generally feeling the pulse of the city.

Characters can cooperate to aid a lead character using this skill. In addition to counting as a success, a successful check opens up the Bluff, Diplomacy, and Intimidate skills.

Advanced Streetwise 1 DC 27 (0 successes or failures)

The PCs ask around about Scaramandar and learn he is a fixer and problem-solver. He has a dubious reputation and is a known double-crosser, but he might aid them in reaching Tu'narath. If the characters follow this lead, they get an audience. Go to "Dealing with the Devil" on page 34.

Characters can cooperate to aid a lead character using this skill.

Advanced Streetwise 2 DC 22 (0 successes or failures)

A little investigation into suitable vehicles to steal comes up with the name Merciless. If the characters follow this lead, they find the vessel with little trouble. See "Merciless" on page 36.

Characters can cooperate to aid a lead character using this skill.

Advanced Streetwise 3 DC 22 (0 successes or failures)

The PCs learn Taikus is still in the city and he might be willing to help. If the characters follow this lead, they find directions to his warehouse. Proceed with "Shortcuts through the Void" on page 36.

Characters can cooperate to aid a lead character using this skill.

DEMONS AMONG US

Encounter Level 20 (14,400 XP)

SETUP

3 goristro slaves (G)

Three hulking goristro demons escaped their handlers by killing them. Free, they vent their rage at innocent bystanders and will not stop until destroyed.

While the PCs explore the market, read:

Screams pierce the Bazaar's steady hum, presaging a mad rush. Through the fleeing people, you see a massive demon leap from one ruined stall to land on another. It whips its chain about, decapitating three too-slow patrons. Two more demons bound into the scene, roaring and screeching in rage.

3 Goristro Slaves (G)		Level 19 Elite Brute
Huge elemental humanoid (demon)		XP 4,800 each
Initiative +10	Senses Perception +17; darkvision
HP 450; Bloodied 225; see also raging frenzy
AC 31; Fortitude 33, Reflex 28, Will 29
Resist 20 variable (2/encounter; see "Resist," Monster Manual , 282)
Saving Throws +2
Speed 8
Action Points 1
⊕ Slam (standard; at-will)
Reach 3; +22 vs. AC; 2d10 + 8 damage.
⊕ Double Attack (standard; at-will)
The goristro makes two slam attacks.
⊕ Goristro Stomp (immediate reaction, when a nonadjacent enemy moves adjacent to the goristro; recharge ⓂⓂⓂ)
The goristro attacks the triggering enemy: +22 vs. AC; 4d8 + 6 damage, and the target is pushed 2 squares and knocked prone.
⊕ Raging Frenzy (immediate reaction, when attacked by an adjacent enemy while bloodied; at-will)
Targets triggering enemy: +22 vs. AC; 2d8 + 6 damage.
⌘ Lashing Chains (standard; at-will)
Ranged 5; +22 vs. AC; 3d10 + 8 damage, and the target is grabbed. Effect: One other creature grabbed by the goristro slides to a space adjacent to the target of the attack, takes 15 damage, and is no longer grabbed.
Alignment Chaotic evil	Languages Abyssal
Str 27 (+17)	Dex 12 (+10)	Wis 17 (+12)
Con 25 (+16)	Int 6 (+7)	Cha 12 (+10)
Equipment chains

TACTICS

The demons are enraged and attack anything that comes too close. A demon uses lashing chains against the first enemy to come in its range, and then uses the attack again against a different target by spending an action point. If a PC closes on the demon, it uses goristro stomp or, if waiting for the power to recharge, it hammers its foe with double attack. The demons fight until destroyed.

FEATURES OF THE AREA

Crowds: During the first round, the characters have cover from the patrons in the Bazaar, but each square a character moves closer to the demons counts as difficult terrain due to the press of fleeing people. During the second round, this environmental effect ends and the PCs are free to move about normally.

Floating Stands: The battlefield consists of several floating stands. Because the PCs are on the Astral Sea, they can fly up to half their speed and hover in place. Since they are clumsy fliers, such characters take a -4 penalty to attack rolls and defenses while flying. A character can choose not to fly and instead jump, making an Athletics check as normal to cross the gaps (Player's Handbook, page 182).

Tents: Many floating stands contain tents. A character inside a tent has total concealment.

Walls: Some floating stands contain walls. Characters behind them gain cover.

DEVELOPMENT

Starting on the fifth round and every 2 rounds thereafter until the end of the encounter, three marut bladesters (Monster Manual, page 185) join the fight to help contain the demons. These combatants do not attack the PCs unless the PCs attack them. If a fight breaks out between the PCs and the maruts, see the “Running Afoul of the Law” sidebar on page 57 for further developments.

CONCLUSION

Once the last demon falls, the Bazaar's commerce resumes as if nothing had happened. The dead drift away and are eventually picked up by locals for rendering into candles and food, but not before they are picked clean of valuables. As the characters recover, Trethrix of the Seven Diamonds appears at their side. A beautiful woman, svelte and appealing, she smiles and thanks the adventurers for their selfless service. As a reward, she gifts them with treasure parcel 5. After she honors the characters, she returns to her palanquin to continue her shopping.

THE DEVIL'S BARGAIN

Encounter Level 19+ (12,600 XP)

SETUP

4 marut escorts (M)

Trethrix (T)

Periodically one of the Seven Diamonds travels the Bazaar to assert that they are the true masters and to encourage commerce. The most recent Diamond to explore the Bazaar is Trethrix. A raavasta, she is thoroughly evil, but she has no special complaint against the adventurers and thus is not prepared for an attack against her.

This encounter occurs only if the adventurers move to assassinate the merchant to gain access to Tu'narath. The best time to strike is when she awaits the portal to open to the Inner Sphere. The adventurers should have plenty of time to scout the area and set up their ambush.

When the PCs can see this scene, read:

A beautiful woman reclines on a palanquin. Standing at each corner is a gray-skinned humanoid wielding a greatsword. The group waits before a shuddering gate ringed with bright glyphs set on the Inner Sphere's surface.

4 Marut Escorts (M)		Level 19 Minion Soldier

Trethrix can alter its physical form to take on the appearance of any Medium humanoid, including a unique individual (see "Change Shape," Monster Manual , page 280).
Enforce Contract (immediate reaction, when an enemy's melee or ranged attack targets Trethrix; recharges when bind is used) ♦ Charm
The attack targets the creature affected by Trethrix's bind power instead of Trethrix. Using this power ends the bind effect on that creature.

TACTICS

The marut escorts form a defensive perimeter around the raavasta to block attempts by enemies to reach their charge. When a foe closes, the maruts use their greatswords to throw back the attacker. They follow Trethrix as she moves about to avoid the PCs' attacks.

While her minions move to protect her, Trethrix uses bind against a tough defender. If the target opts to become dominated, she compels it to make basic attacks against its allies. If she comes under attack, she safeguards herself by using enforce contract, at which point she chooses a different target to bind. If two or more PCs close on her, she uses mind stab to drive them off and spends an action point to hit a target she misses with her beguiling claws. If she drops to 100 hit points or fewer, she uses vanish to make an escape if possible.

The marut blademasters that come through the portal (see "Development" on the next page) close on the closest enemy, fighting their way to the raavasta's side using teleport if necessary. Once there, they take up the roles her escorts performed and fight to the death defending the fiend.

FEATURES OF THE AREA

Inner Sphere Gate: A massive gate leads to Citadel Mercane's interior. It takes 5 minutes to open or close the gate fully due to its great weight. The gate is made from adamantine and has an AC 2, other defenses 20; resist 20 all; hp 1,000. Breaching the gate allows access to the Inner Sphere (page 33).

Statues: Eight 20-foot-tall statues in two rows of four stand to either side of the portal. The statue has an AC 2, Fortitude 20, Reflex 2, hp 400. If a statue takes 50 or more damage, blue blood sprays in a continuous close blast 3 in the direction from the attack. The blood is harmless, but it grants concealment to creatures standing in the blast.

Lightning Ward: To protect the inner sphere, the Society of Seven Diamonds placed powerful wards around their gates. The lightning ward attacks when any natural creature enters a space adjacent to the ward.

⊖ Lightning Ward ♦ Lightning

Melee 1; +22 vs. Reflex; 1d8 + 7 lightning damage, and the target is pushed 1d4 squares and is dazed until the end of its next turn.

Palanquin: Trethrix rides on a levitating palanquin.

Trethrix's Palanquin

Medium vehicle

HP 30 Space 1 square Cost 1,800 gp

AC 5; Fortitude 10, Reflex 5

Pilot

The pilot must maintain concentration (minor action) or the palanquin goes out of control.

Load

One Medium creature; 100 pounds of gear.

Out of Control

An out-of-control palanquin comes to a stop at the beginning of its turn.

Compact

An adjacent creature can fold up an unoccupied palanquin as a standard action into a tiny object.

Treasure: Trethrix carries treasure parcel 10 on her person.

DEVELOPMENT

After the third round, the gate is wide enough for one marut blademaster to join the fight. Every other round thereafter, another two join the battle. This continues until five blademasters emerge.

Marut Blademaster	Level 21 Soldier

Characters who fail to kill Trethrix and flee into the Bazaar are hunted for the remainder of their stay here. See "Running Afoul of the Law" on page 34 for further developments.

CONCLUSION

After killing the raavasta, the PCs can move to the appointed place. A rakshasa proxy working for Scaramandar gives them a ritual scroll, the sigil address, and residuum enough to perform the ritual. Depending on how the PCs' mission went, they might need to retreat farther up into the mountain to escape vengeance-seeking maruts. They could, while there, face additional encounters as described on page 31. Completing the ritual, though, transports the adventurers to Tu'narath as the cambion promised.

When the PCs enter Pier Nine, read:

Docks stretch out all along the metal pier, many of which hold astral vessels in all sorts of shapes and sizes. As you near the end, the ships thin out until there are none for the final 100 or so feet. At the very end, you spy the Merciless, a sleek ship with an enclosed deck equipped with patched sails and long navigation rods sprouting from the hull. Hatches grant access to its interior and crystalline portals might provide a glimpse into its interior.

An observation deck towers over the ship, with metal rungs ascending to a hatch at the deck's bottom.

Ri's'an and the two pirates recline on the observation deck, while the surviving pirates make the final preparations for departure. TACTICS

The githyanki pirates shout for Captain Ri's'an if an adventurer opens a hatch, thus raising the alarm. Otherwise, the pirates are oblivious to combat outside the skiff until the start of round 3 when one finally comes out from the craft and sees the fight.

Once alerted, three of the githyanki pirates take their stations, while the fourth spends a move action to move the ship 3 squares and turn it broadside to bring the pier into its firing arc. The pirates fire at the PCs using their crossbows.

The githyanki mates lead the attack, either using astral stride to engage the PCs on the pier below or fighting PCs who engage them at the platform. They use psychic assault first followed by merciless cut.

Ri's'an fights from the observation deck, using his double attack to support his mates and psychic spear to pin down enemy defenders. Ri's'an doesn't engage the PCs in melee unless he is the only thing between them and his ship, at which point he closes the distance with astral stride and directs his psychic blade attacks at controllers and leaders first.

FEATURES OF THE AREA

Observation Deck: The observation deck stands 30 feet above the pier and has an open top. With subjective gravity, PCs can fly to the top using the normal rules for navigating the Astral Sea (page 57). Or, a character can climb the ladder up to the hatch with a DC 0 Athletics check.

The Merciless: The vessel is an astral skiff.

Merciless
Gargantuan vehicle (astral skiff)
HP 250 Space 2 squares by 6 squares Cost 13,000 gp
AC 4; Fortitude 20, Reflex 2
Speed fly 12 (hover), overland flight 15
Pilot
The pilot must stand at a control wheel, typically at the rear of the astral skiff .
Crew
In addition to the pilot, an astral skiff requires a crew of three, all of whom use a standard action each round to control the skiff. Reduce the skiff's fly speed by 4 squares for each missing crewmember. At fly speed 0, the Merciless sails out of control.
Load
Ten Medium creatures; one ton of cargo
Out of Control
An out-of-control astral skiff moves forward at half speed (not including any modifiers for its astral sails).
Astral Attunement
The astral skiff functions only in the Astral Sea.
Fragile Propulsion
For every 25 damage the Merciless takes, its speed is reduced by 2 squares. At fly speed 0, the ship comes to a stop.

The ship provides superior cover to creatures inside. Two portals on each side allow occupants to make attacks against enemies outside the vessel.

Treasure: The characters gain treasure parcel 20, which includes the Merciless. In addition, planar charts reveal a quick route to Tu'narath through a nearby color veil.

SECRET WAY

Encounter Level 19 (12,000 XP)

SETUP

Negotiated Passage (Skill Challenge)

2 angels of Tiamat's vengeance

Taikus (T)

Along the way to the warehouse, two angels of Tiamat's vengeance, who have been watching the characters, follow them to the site. About 5 minutes before the characters arrive, both angels—from as far away as you like—target two PCs with sign of vengeance. Since this sign is invisible and harmless, the character doesn't notice it. However, a DC 29 Arcana check reveals its general presence and nature. A DC 25 Religion check identifies its source.

When the PCs enter the warehouse, read:

Wooden crates stand in piles forming three rows extending to the warehouse's far wall. Aside from these goods and dust floating through the air, the place seems empty.

Taikus has a permanent portal linking Tu'narath to Citadel Mercane inside an extradimensional space hidden at the back of the warehouse. When the characters enter the building, Taikus is inside the extradimensional space. He emerges 2 rounds later. Characters searching the warehouse can find the extradimensional space with a DC 29 Arcana check or a DC 27 Perception check. If the characters find the space while the githzerai is still inside, the PCs take a -2 penalty to all Diplomacy checks made as part of the "Negotiated Passage" skill challenge.

Negotiated Passage Skill Challenge

Level 19
XP 2,400

The githzerai watches you with suspicion, uncertain of your motives.

The adventurers must convince Taikus that they aim to help the Separatists. This skill challenge takes a few minutes.

Complexity

1 (4 successes before 3 failures).

Primary Skills

Bluff, Diplomacy, Insight.

Other Skills

History, Intimidate.

Victory

Taikus leads the PCs to the extradimensional space, but before the PCs reach it, the angels of Tiamat's vengeance attack.

Defeat

Taikus denies the PCs access to the portal. Before the characters have a chance to react, the angels of Tiamat's vengeance attack, further damning the PCs in the githzerai's eyes.

Bluff (DC 22)

The PC gives a false reason for wanting to reach Tu'narath. A failed check here results in two failures.

Diplomacy (DC 22)

The characters explain their mission and ask for aid. The first success makes available the History check.

History (DC 22; Requires a successful Diplomacy check)

A PC recalls some of the worst raids and excesses by the githyanki, relating these tales to his or her mission and how the group intends to stop future attacks.

Insight (DC 22)

A PC senses the githzerai is nervous and catches him throwing a glance to an innocuous stack of crates (he's looking at the entrance to the extradimensional space). This check also reveals that Intimidate does not work on Taikus.

Intimidate (DC 30)

Taikus is not easily moved by threats. Each failed Intimidate check applies a -5 penalty to all future checks made as part of this skill challenge.

When Taikus appears, read:

Stepping out from around a stack is a rail-thin githzerai wearing a tattered cloak. He looks at you with a raised eyebrow, "Can I help you?"

‡ Double Attack (standard; at-will)
 The angel of vengeance makes two longsword attacks.

↗ Sign of Vengeance (minor; encounter) ♦ Teleportation
 Ranged sight; the angel of vengeance places an invisible sign upon the target. Until the end of the encounter, as a move action, the angel can teleport adjacent to the target.

↖ Chromatic Pillar (when first bloodied; encounter) ♦ Acid, Cold, Fire, Lightning, Poison, Polymorph
 The angel transforms into a 30-foot-high pillar of draconic energies. Close burst 2; +23 vs. Reflex; 1d8 + 9 acid, cold, fire, lightning, or poison damage plus 1d8 + 9 acid, cold, fire, lightning, or poison damage. The angel of Tiamat's vengeance is immune to all damage until the start of its next turn.

Chromatic Cloak (until bloodied) ♦ Acid, Cold, Fire, Lightning, Poison
 Attacks against the angel of vengeance take a -2 penalty until the angel is bloodied. While cloak of vengeance is in effect, a creature that makes a successful melee attack against the angel takes 1d8 acid or cold damage and 1d8 fire, lightning, or poison damage.

↗ Reorder Chaos (standard; recharge Ⓜ Ⓜ) ♦ Teleportation
 Ranged sight; up to 4 Medium or smaller targets; +19 vs. Fortitude; the targets teleport to swap spaces as Taikus chooses.

↗ Trace Chance (standard; recharge Ⓜ Ⓜ)
 Ranged 5; no attack roll required; the next melee attack made against the target gains a +5 power bonus to the attack roll, and, if it hits, it is automatically a critical hit.

TACTICS

The angels teleport into spaces adjacent to the adventurers whom they targeted with sign of vengeance and then make double attacks each round.

Taikus uses trace chance at the earliest opportunity and spends his action point on the first round to use inner spark. He then uses psychic fists when he can catch the greatest number enemies in one shot or reorder chaos to better arrange the battlefield. Taikus enters the extradimensional space when bloodied and uses the portal to warn the Separatists in Tu'narath.

FEATURES OF THE AREA

Illumination: Everburning torches set on the walls fill the entire warehouse with bright light.

Ceiling: The ceiling is 30 feet high.

Crates: Boxes and crates are arranged in four rows, each 10 feet tall. An adjacent character can make a DC 22 Strength check to knock the stack over. The toppled stack fills all squares in a line up to the next stack. Creatures in the path are entitled to a saving throw to shift into an adjacent square. A failed saving throw results in the character taking 4d6 damage and being knocked prone and restrained (save ends both). Until cleared, the toppled stack counts as difficult terrain.

Extradimensional Space: The portal opens onto a small room with a permanent portal contained by a hermetic circle in the corner. The portal is opaque. Characters entering it appear in Tu'narath (page 38).

KILL SQUAD

Encounter Level 19 (13,600 XP)

SETUP

- 1 githyanki blackweaver (B)
- 1 githyanki dread knight (K)
- 4 Tiamat-sworn reavers (T)

Moving through the portal alerts servants loyal to Zetch'r'r, and the emperor dispatches a kill squad to deal with the intruders. This encounter can occur in the alley where the PCs first appear or later if the PCs move quickly.

TACTICS

The githyanki dread knight leads the attack, springing into action using telekinetic leap to land in the party's midst. There, he slashes about him using his silver greatsword, focusing his attacks on soft enemies. If an enemy he marks tries to slip away, he delivers a punishing severing strike. If only one character is near him, he resorts to forceful lure to yank them back.

The blackweaver avoids melee combat, blasting characters with black lightning and targeting them again to benefit from Lich-Queen's legacy. If cornered, the blackweaver uses consuming shadows to make a getaway.

The Tiamat-sworn weavers have no particular loyalty to the emperor or the githyanki, and they fight only as long as they have the upper hand. Each reaver targets a different enemy, using rending strike to destroy their enemies. Once they make their attack, they shift and charge, even if it means taking an opportunity attack. These skirmishers maneuver as best as they can in the tight confines, but if they find it too restrictive, they retreat to the street beyond to conclude the battle.

TAKING PRISONERS

If the characters take any prisoners, they might learn useful information. The blackweaver and the dread knight prove unhelpful and volunteer nothing, but the dragonborn can be convinced to talk with a complexity 1 skill challenge (4 successes before 3 failure) involving DC 22 checks with the Bluff, Diplomacy, and Intimidate skills. A victory reveals that the emperor dispatched them. The prisoner knows that Tiamat watches the emperor closely, and many suspect she might remove him altogether if it wasn't for the scepter of Ephelomon. Zetch'r'r, evidently, fears that the adventurers might connect with the rebels and form an alliance against him.

If the characters have no failures from the skill challenge, the prisoner also reveals that the emperor has many more kill squads out in the city, hunting for Separatist leaders. They have had some success and have even captured their leader, "some waif who who has taken Vlaakith's name. She's pretty important since the emperor didn't just kill her outright. In fact, he spirited her away to one of the floating fortresses."

FEATURES OF THE AREA

Illumination: Shadows cast by the buildings reduce the lighting in the alley to dim.

Permanent Portal: The PCs emerge into the alley through this portal. The PCs can move through the portal freely provided it remains open, which is only likely if the characters used Taikus's portal. Refer back to the map on page 63 in case the adventurers retreat here.

Rubbish: Boxes, crates, and general filth clutter the alley. Squares containing rubbish count as difficult terrain.

Illusory Wall: Spanning the alley's mouth is an illusory wall. Characters can see through it out to the street beyond, but people on the street can't see through it into the alley. Thus, the wall blocks line of sight for characters on the street.

Street: The combat might spill out onto the street beyond. People clear the area quickly, not wanting to be involved in the fight.

BLUE THUNDER

Encounter Level 19 (13,900 XP)

SETUP

7 angels of Tiamat (A)

1 bluespawm godslayer (B)

The kill squad's failure prompts Zetch'r'r to send another band to intercept the adventurers before they meet with the Separatists. They choose a walled square to make their attack.

At some point before the PCs find the Morningstar Inn, read:

The crowds thin until you are alone in a walled square. Two empty bridges crisscross overhead, and an impressive statue depicting a githyanki warrior riding a red dragon dominates the square's center. The eerie stillness is broken when a hulking humanoid, some strange cross between giant and blue dragon, enters the square. Joining it are several winged angels whose torsos give way to wispy nothingness.

TACTICS

The bluespawm godslayer charges into combat, smashing a character with its greatsword. It attacks any dragonborn or devas first, targeting defenders next. On its next turn, it makes another greatsword attack followed by awesome blow with an action point. The godslayer tries to push its enemy onto a spike and then focus on that opponent until it dies.

The angels work in teams of three, surrounding their opponents and slashing with their greatswords until their enemy falls. The angels fight until destroyed.

FEATURES OF THE AREA

Bridges: Two bridges span the square. The first is 15 feet above the squares and the second is 30 feet above.

Spike: Three corners contain bristling spikes. Any creature forcibly moved into a space containing a spike is subject to an attack.

☞ Spike
Melee 0; +23 vs. Reflex; 10 damage, and the target is immobilized (save ends). Aftereffect: The target takes 5 damage.

Statue: It takes a DC 22 Athletics check to enter the statue's space. A character in its space gains cover against all attacks.

ASSAULTING THE FORTRESS

Encounter Level 20 (15,300 XP)

SETUP

7 ballista platforms

26 githwarriors (G)

2 githyanki dragonknights riding pact dragon steeds (P)

1 githyanki terrth (T)

As the adventurers near the Fortress of Three Sorrows, the githyanki within mobilize to meet the threat.

Five githwarriors accompany the githyanki terrth (fortress commander), and three githwarriors operate each of the seven ballista platforms.

When the PCs see the fortress, read:

The fortress hovers on the astral horizon, a statue's decapitated head tilted on its side with a squat tower rising up from where its ear should be. Silver chains tether three smaller towers, each floating on tiny islands. Two red dragons with riders emerge from its maw.

TACTICS

The first time the githyanki terrth hits an enemy with his silver longsword, he uses instructive slash. On subsequent turns, he follows up his longsword attacks with slaughter the weak. Meanwhile, the pact dragons and their riders attack any lone adventurers, or if there aren't any, their vehicle.

7 Ballista Platforms (B) Level 19 Blaster Hazard XP 2,400

A massive crossbow manned by three crewmen, these platforms hurl spear-size bolts at foes.

Hazard: Seven ballista platforms arranged around the battlefield fire at enemies.

Perception

No check is necessary to notice the ballista platforms.

Trigger

When the PCs move into line of sight to a platform, a platform's crew rolls initiative and attack on their turn. A ballista requires a standard action to reload.

Initiative

A ballista platform acts on the initiative of its crew.

Attack

Standard Action Ranged 30

Target: One creature

Attack: +24 vs. Reflex

Hit: 4d8 + 7 damage.

Countermeasure

- ◆ A character can attack a crewmember (a githwarrior). If the PCs kill two crewmembers, that ballista can fire only every other round. If the PCs kill all three crewmembers, that platform is effectively disabled, although they could fire the ballista themselves.
- ◆ A character can attack the ballista (AC 5, Fortitude 10, Reflex 5; hp 60). Destroying the ballista disables the platform.

SETUP

2 gish'sarath (S)

8 githwarriors (G)

1 githyanki kith'rak (K)

1 redspawn immolator (R)

While the battle rages outside, the githyanki scramble to defend the fortress to ensure Vlaakith doesn't escape. The kith'rak (captain) and support troops are the first line of defense inside the fortress, with reinforcements coming on the round following.

When the PCs can see into the central room, read:

A shuddering red-scaled beast crowned with fire growls at you while a githyanki dressed in black-enameled plate and wielding a fullblade shouts orders to attack. Two githyanki underlings in scale armor ready themselves for battle.

The ladder drops from the roof trapdoor and ends at a 30-foot diameter chamber with an iron door set in the wall to either side. A spiral staircase burrows deeper into the tower.

TACTICS

The githyanki's tactics depend on whether the adventurers descend into the central room. If they linger at the top, the githwarriors use their crossbows and the gish'sarath uses force bolt. The redspawn immolator climbs the ladder, sped up by the kith'rak, who uses telekinetic leap to place the monster near the top.

The githyanki focus fire on the first character to come down the ladder, and then engage in melee combat when more characters join their companion. The dragonspawn makes a charge attack against the closest enemy and then uses its claws, fighting until destroyed.

The kith'rak uses telekinetic snare to move an enemy closer to the redspawn immolator and uses his silver fullblade to dispatch the character. The kith'rak reserves devastating arc for when it faces three or more enemies at once, and uses emperor's voice when the dragonspawn's redspawn fury activates.

The gish'sarath supports the githwarriors using force bolt and storm of stars, only reverting to melee attacks when he exhausts his ranged attacks.

Reinforcements in the hall outside the main chamber arrive at the start of the second round, while those in the barracks join the fight at the start of the fourth round.

FEATURES OF THE AREA

Ceiling: The ceiling is 30 feet high.

Iron Ladder: The ladder descends from the hatch to the bottom of the room. Climbing the ladder requires a DC 0 Athletics check.

Doors: Iron bars can be dropped over the doors to prevent reinforcements from arriving (DC 27 Strength check). The bars themselves count as unattended objects weighing less than 20 pounds.

Cells: Prison cells make up a third of this floor. Each door is locked (DC 22 Thievery or DC 27 Strength to open). The cells contain a mix of political prisoners or nothing (as you decide). None of these prisoners are useful for this foray (treat as minions; all defenses 22), but they might prove helpful later.

Barracks: Opposite the cells are the barracks. This big room features many bunk beds, a few tables surrounded by chairs, and a kitchen.

Treasure: Characters searching the barracks find treasure parcel 8 amid mundane clothing and personal effects.

JAIL BREAK

Encounter Level 21 (16,000 XP)

SETUP

1 angel of Tiamat's Vengeance (A)

1 aspect of Dispatser (D)

2 barbed devil veterans (B)

The aspect of Dispatser interrogates the prisoner while his attendants watch.

When the PCs can see Vlaakith, read:

Suspended within a column of fire is a young githyanki woman. Her body doesn't move, but her eyes flick toward you. To the side, and turning your direction, is a towering angel whose astral essence crackles with lightning, flares with flames, and drips poison. Opposite the guardian stands a slim, horned humanoid dressed in scarlet robes and gripping a gnarled staff in his hands. Just inside the doorway, two menacing humanoids covered in gleaming barbs fix you with fiery eyes.

⊕ Smiting Rod (standard; at-will) ♦ Weapon
+25 vs. AC; 2d8 + 6 damage, and the target is pushed 2 squares and dazed until the end of the aspect of Dispatser's next turn.
‡ Lesser Blasphemous Reply (immediate reaction, when hit by a melee attack; recharges when first bloodied) ♦ Thunder
Targets the attacker; +24 vs. Will; 3d8 + 7 thunder damage, and the target is pushed 1 square.
✧ Lesser Inveigle (standard; recharge ☒ ☑) ♦ Charm, Psychic
Ranged 10; +24 vs. Will; 2d6 + 7 psychic damage, and the target slides 2 squares and is dominated until the end of the aspect of Dispatser's next turn.
A Lesser Gate of Dis (minor; recharge ☒ ☑) ♦ Conjuration, Fire
Area wall 5 within 20 squares. The aspect of Dispatser conjures a lattice of scalding iron that lasts until the start of his next turn. The wall blocks movement and line of effect, but it does not block line of sight. Creatures that end their turn adjacent to the wall or are pulled, pushed, or slid adjacent to the wall take 10 fire damage. The wall is 4 squares high and cannot be destroyed.
Lesser Diabolic Awe (free 1/round, when an enemy within 5 squares becomes bloodied or takes a critical hit; at-will) ♦ Fear, Healing
The enemy is pushed 3 squares away from the aspect of Dispatser and is dazed until the end of the aspect's next turn. Creatures with the devil keyword within 5 squares of the aspect of Dispatser regain 10 hit points.

TACTICS

The angel uses sign of vengeance and then closes on the lead enemy, using double attack each round until bloodied, at which point it transforms into a chromatic pillar.

The aspect uses lesser inveigle to draw a character into the room and then spends an action point to raise his lesser gate of Dis. The aspect focuses on the unlucky character with its smiting rod, while waiting for his powers to recharge.

The barbed devils back away from the entrance to pull the adventurers into the room. They use hurl flame on the first round, and then use double attack against those PCs who enter.

Disputer tries to flee if reduced to 95 or fewer hit points, surrendering only if he's the last one in the room. When the PCs first bloody the aspect, it shouts, "Release her and you will bring about the doom of all things!"

FEATURES OF THE AREA

Doors: All doors here are locked. The kith'rak in "Desperate Defenders" (page 70) has the keys. Otherwise, opening a locked door requires a DC 25 Strength or Thievery check.

Treasure: A character searching the armory who succeeds on a DC 22 Perception check locates treasure parcels 2 and 3. A character searching the storerooms who succeeds on a DC 22 Perception check discovers treasure parcel 6 spread across both rooms.

Fighting Ring: The fighting ring a roped-off platform standing two feet high. Getting into the fighting ring costs an extra square of movement unless a DC 14 Acrobatics check is made.

Training Dummies: Three dummies equipped with sharp blades stand at the ready to engage would-be trainees. The dummy makes an attack against any creature that enters a square adjacent to it unless the triggering creature succeeds on a DC 14 Acrobatics check.

⊕ Training Dummy Slash
 Melee 1; +26 vs. AC; 10 damage, and the target is pushed 1 square.

Hermetic Circle: The circle creates a dangerous field that extends from floor to ceiling. Creatures inside the field are immune to all damage, and the field blocks line of effect. An adjacent character can dismantle the field by engaging in a complexity 1 skill challenge (4 successes before 3 failures) involving Arcana and Thievery checks against DC 22. A failed check or touching the field triggers an attack.

↔ Energy Field Pulse ♦ Fire
 Close burst 1; all creatures in burst; +25 vs. Reflex; 2d8 + 7 fire damage, and the target takes ongoing 10 fire damage (save ends).

TACTICS

When the githyanki are no longer surprised, the dragonknights mount their dragons and attack the PCs, even though they have little room to maneuver. Using Deep Speech, one dragonknight orders a crew onto an astral interceptor to get help. Four githwarriors converge on the vessel to take off and get help, ramming PCs if necessary.

DEVELOPMENT

The heroes must stop the fleeing astral interceptor before it escapes and brings reinforcements. This could be a thrilling chase over Tu'narath or a vicious battle in the Astral Sea. If the ship gets away, use creatures presented in this adventure to build a level 22 encounter. These reinforcements arrive 5 minutes after the ship escapes.

FEATURES OF THE AREA

Astral Interceptor: Two astral vessels stand at the ready. They have enclosed hulls, so creatures inside cannot be targeted by attacks. See page 46 for statistics.

Supplies: Squares containing these items count as difficult terrain, and a creature knocked prone here takes 5 damage from the jagged bits and pointy things.

A TURNING POINT

Encounter Level 21 (16,000 XP)

SETUP

The moment for which the adventures have long fought is at hand. Vlaakith and her lieutenants are open to discussion about withdrawing the githyanki from the war and might be convinced to give their aid in the ongoing struggle.

A Turning Point Skill Challenge

Level 21
XP 16,000

The room hums as the gathered assembly awaits your words. In their cold faces, you see everything from blank stares, to suspicion, to open hatred. Vlaakith stands and the room quiets. “These visitors have come a long way and have endured many hardships. Let us hear their words to seek an accord between our peoples.”

Although the githyanki want nothing to do with Tiamat’s war, they are not allies yet. To get the githyanki to withdraw fully from the war, the characters must make a bargain all can live with.

Complexity

5 (12 successes before 3 failures).

Primary Skills

Diplomacy, History, Insight, Intimidate, Religion, Streetwise.

Other Skills

Bluff.

Victory

Vlaakith agrees to withdraw the githyanki from the war provided the characters successfully defeat Zetch’r’r. Vlaakith also grants the PCs’ world a reprieve from githyanki attacks for a thousand years (though this applies only to those githyanki under Vlaakith’s command; she doesn’t mention this). Finally, if the characters acquire no failures in the course of the skill challenge, Vlaakith agrees to a short-term alliance between her people and those of the adventurers. Such an alliance proves beneficial to the PCs in a future Scales of War adventure.

Defeat

Vlaakith agrees to withdraw the githyanki from the war but only with the following conditions. The adventurers must kill Zetch’r’r, and they must find and destroy the remains of Vlaakith CLVII.

Special

If Mayhem is present for the negotiations, he can speak on the characters behalf, assuming the characters have performed and treated him well. At any point during the negotiation, the PCs can convert one failed check into a successful check.

If the PCs rescued Vlaakith and freed her without question, the characters gain a +2 bonus to all Diplomacy checks. This bonus increases to +4 if the PCs saved her after dealing with the Emperor.

Bluff (DC 27)

The PCs make promises or offers they cannot actually follow through on or have no intention to uphold.

Characters can cooperate to aid a lead character using this skill.

Diplomacy 1 (DC 22; 2 successes)

The PCs describe their predicament, what they know of Tiamat’s intent, and what will result if she is victorious.

Characters can cooperate to aid a lead character using this skill. Achieving 2 successes opens up Diplomacy 2.

Diplomacy 2 (DC 22; 2 successes maximum; requires Diplomacy 1 to unlock)

The PCs explain that through their alliance with Tiamat, the githyanki have become embroiled in a divine war not of their making and they are taking a hand in the fate of the gods.

Achieving 2 successes opens up Diplomacy 3.

Diplomacy 3 (DC 27; 2 successes maximum; requires Diplomacy 2 or Streetwise to unlock)

The PCs announce that Tiamat has violated the ancient pact and thus the githyanki are no longer bound by its terms. One githyanki asks that if this is true, where is Gith?

Characters can cooperate to aid a lead character using this skill. The first success here opens up Insight. The second success opens up Diplomacy 4.

Diplomacy 4 (DC 22; 4 successes maximum; requires Diplomacy 3 to unlock)

The PCs ask for an alliance.

Characters can cooperate to aid a lead character using this skill. On the first success, Vlaakith says that even if they agreed, their alliance would be worthless while Zetch’r’r is still in power. This opens up Diplomacy 5. On a failed check, the characters cannot make this check again until they succeed on another check related to the skill challenge.

Diplomacy 5

The PCs volunteer to destroy Zetch’r’r and end his reign.

Characters can cooperate to aid a lead character using this skill.

History (DC 14; 1 success maximum; requires Diplomacy 4 to unlock)

A character recalls the terms of the ancient pact, remembering that Gith demanded the githyanki be free to rule their own destiny.

DC 27 (1 success, 2 maximum)

Insight (DC 22; 1 success maximum; requires Diplomacy 3 to unlock)

The PCs notice Vlaakith flinches when they mention the pact has been violated.

Characters can cooperate to aid a lead character using this skill. A success here also opens up Intimidate.

Intimidate (DC 27)

The PCs paint a pretty bleak picture about what is in store for the githyanki if they don’t withdraw from the war, suggesting that they will be destroyed if they lose or become subservient to Tiamat if they win.

Characters can cooperate to aid a lead character using this skill.

Religion 1 (DC 22 (1 success maximum))

A character describes Tiamat’s notoriety and her long history of betrayals by citing key moments where she has acted in the world. This bleak portrait calls into question the strength of the githyanki alliance with the Dark Lady.

Success opens up Religion 2.

Religion 2 (DC 22; 1 success maximum; requires Religion 1 or Streetwise to unlock)

A PC reminds the githyanki that no god has ever ruled the githyanki peoples.

Streetwise (DC 14; 2 successes maximum)

A character cites an example of how Tiamat actually controls the city, and also how Zetch’r’r serves Tiamat directly.

The first success also opens up the Religion 2 check. The second success opens up Diplomacy 3.

FAILURE

A defeat on this skill challenge doesn’t mean the adventure is over; it results in an even greater challenge and no guarantees that the githyanki won’t become a problem at some future point.

STILLNESS BROKEN

Encounter Level 19 (12,400 XP)

SETUP

- 3 slaughter wights (S)
- 1 tormenting ghost (T)
- 2 wrath spirits (W)

The undead hunger for souls and attack when the characters draw near.

When the PCs are about halfway to the Chromatic Bastion, read:

The path travels through a damaged area, with a yawning fissure to one side and crumbling tombs and rubble to the other. Black fire gutters up in columns on either side of the road.

‡ Ghostly Possession (standard; recharge ☼ ☼) ♦ Charm
Target must be a living humanoid; +24 vs. Will; the tormenting ghost enters the target's space and is removed from play, and the target is dominated (save ends). The tormenting ghost can use the power against only one creature at a time. When the target is no longer dominated, or when the tormenting ghost chooses to end its ghostly possession (a free action), the ghost reappears in a square adjacent to the target.
↔ Burst of Terror (standard; recharge ☼ ☼) ♦ Fear, Necrotic
Close burst 5; targets enemies; +24 vs. Will; 1d8 + 9 necrotic damage, the target is pushed 5 squares; and the target is dazed and immobilized (save ends both).
✱ Ghostly Terrain (standard; at-will) ♦ Zone
Area burst 1 within 10; the area is suddenly filled with ghostly lights, wisps of necrotic mist, and the faint whispers of the dead. The zone is difficult terrain and lightly obscured. Any creature that enters or ends its turn in the zone is immobilized (save ends). The zone lasts until the end of the encounter or for 5 minutes.

Con 15 (+10)	Int 22 (+14)	Cha 24 (+15)

FEATURES OF THE AREA

Rubble: Squares containing rubble count as difficult terrain.

Chasms: The small chasm is about 30 feet deep (dealing 3d10 damage to those who fall in), while the larger one is about 90 feet deep (9d10 damage). Climbing out of a chasm requires DC 14 Athletics checks.

Sealed Vaults: A vault grants cover and has AC 5, Fortitude 10, Reflex 5; hp 40.

Mausoleums: A locked door (DC 27 Thievery or DC 32 Strength) bars access. Each tomb holds a stone sarcophagus and the rotting remains within it. The tormenting ghost and wrath spirits use phasing to move through the mausoleums' walls unimpeded.

Pillars of Necrotic Flame: Black fire gutters from wounds in the dead god. Necrotic attacks made from spaces adjacent to either pillar gain a +10 bonus to damage rolls. Creatures entering or starting their turns in a space containing the necrotic flame take 10 fire and necrotic damage.

Treasure: One shattered mausoleum contains parcel 1.

TACTICS

The slaughter wights shriek to alert their allies in the tombs, charge, and then make a fighting retreat to the pillars of necrotic flame to boost their attacks. The wrath spirits fly around behind the PCs to herd them forward, while the tormenting ghost finds a melee striker and attacks using burst of terror.

EVIL'S BACKBONE

Encounter Level 21 (18,000 XP)

SETUP

Spine of Vlaakith (V)

2 sword wraith attendants (S)

When Zetch'r'r came to power, the githyanki believed the Lich-Queen was well and truly dead. However, the new emperor discovered that a piece of her remained: her spine. Through dread magic, Zetch'r'r bound her spirit to the spine and extracted oaths of service from it, transforming the dead Lich-Queen into a form of demilich. As long as Zetch'r'r lives, Vlaakith would serve.

When the PCs enter the room, read:

A blackened spine hovers before an iron door across the room. Pale blue light from the flickering torches glint off six bright amethysts set into each bone ring. The spine casts a queer shadow on the white tile floor, suggesting that of a tall, thin female humanoid.

Ranged 20; +25 vs. Fortitude; the target takes ongoing 10 necrotic damage (save ends).

☞ Twin Rays (standard; at-will) ♦ Necrotic

The spine of Vlaakith makes a shadow ray attack and a immobilizing ray attack.

☞ Soul Shriveling Pulse (immediate reaction, when a creature fails a saving throw against drain soul; at-will) ♦ Fear, Necrotic

Close burst 5; +25 vs. Fortitude; 3d6 + 5 necrotic damage, and the target takes a –2 penalty to saving throws (save ends).

☞ Consume Soul (minor; expends a trapped soul; recharge ☐☐) ♦ Healing

The spine of Vlaakith regains 200 hit points.

Soul Gems

The spine of Vlaakith's six soul gems can each hold the soul of one of its victims. At the beginning of an encounter, the soul gems contain two souls. Crushing a gem after the spine is defeated releases the soul back to the Shadowfell.

Indestructible

When the spine of Vlaakith is reduced to 0 hit points or fewer, its spine (but not the soul gems) crumbles into dust, but it is not destroyed. It reappears 1d10 days later within 1 square of its phylactery (in room 15), unless the phylactery is also found and destroyed.

TACTICS

Vlaakith would gladly let the PCs pass to destroy the emperor, but Zetch'r'r's magic impels her to attack. She waits for the characters to attack first or to move past the first pair of columns, at which point she attacks using twin rays. She then uses her drain soul attack by spending action point if the target is within 5 squares. She uses this tactics against any opponent who draws too close, using her immobilizing ray to keep fleeing enemies in place.

The sword wraith attendants harry PCs who don't close on the spine, using phasing to move through the floor and come up behind their opponents. They work together to ensure they get flanking. If they find themselves close to a dazed enemy, they don't pass up the chance to strike the afflicted enemy with their shadow swords in the hopes of spawning a new sword wraith.

FEATURES OF THE AREA

Illumination: Two everburning torches in sconces to either side of the door to room 3 fill the room with bright light.

Ceiling: The ceiling is 30 feet high.

Columns: Four columns, each 3 feet wide, support the ceiling overhead. The columns provide cover.

FATE OF DRAINED SOULS

When a victim of the drain soul attack fails its second saving throw, the victim's soul is trapped in one of Vlaakith's spine gems. The soul's former body crumbles into dust at the end of the creature's next turn. If the spine is destroyed, each creature trapped in a gem is targeted by an attack: +25 vs. Will; the soul is destroyed. On a miss, the soul remains intact but is trapped in a gem. If a target's soul remains intact within a gem, then the gem glows with faint inner light and reveals an image of a tiny figure inside. This gem can be used as part of the Raise Dead ritual, reducing the component cost by half. The Raise Dead ritual can still bring back a target whose soul is destroyed.

Stained-Glass Windows: The stained glass windows are not made of glass at all. They are instead congealed hatred. Any creature that starts its turn in a square adjacent to the window makes a melee basic attack or a charge attack against the closest creature and treats allies as enemies for the purpose of opportunity attacks until the start of the creature's next turn. Each window has AC 5 Fortitude 10, Reflex 5; hp 5. A destroyed window loses this effect.

RED SENTINELS

Encounter Level 19 (12,000 XP)

SETUP

2 adult red dragons (R)

Str 25 (+14) Dex 19 (+11) Wis 16 (+10)

Con 22 (+13) Int 13 (+8) Cha 14 (+9)

TACTICS

The two dragons are accustomed to working with each other. When the PCs enter, they take to the air, flying 20 feet above the floor, and close to deliver their breath weapon attacks against the largest group of characters. They then spend an action point each to charge a character they hit with their breath weapons.

After, both dragons maneuver to position themselves on opposite sides of the PCs. The first dragon uses frightful presence to send the PCs fleeing while the other dragon bites any character that moves past it. On the round following, they do the same thing, but in reverse.

The dragons save their second action points for when they are bloodied, using them to combine bite attacks with their breath weapons, or, failing that, combine a bite with double attack.

FEATURES OF THE AREA

Illumination: The pools of fire fill this room with bright light.

Ceiling: The ceiling in this room is 50 feet high.

Dais: A dais stands on the opposite side of the room, flanked by the dragons. The steps up are steep and count as difficult terrain.

Iron Doors: The iron doors are not locked, but they are super-hot. Characters opening them by hand take 10 fire damage.

Fiery Pools: Two pools of naphtha burn. A creature that enters or starts its turn adjacent to a pool takes 5 fire damage, while a creature that enters or starts its turn in a pool takes 10 fire damage and ongoing 10 fire damage (save ends).

The fires are so intense that a creature standing in or behind them is lightly obscured.

Heat: Heat from the burning pools imposes a -2 penalty to all attack rolls to all creatures that do not have resist fire of 10 or more.

Treasure: The dragons' hoard consists of treasure parcels 14, 18, and 19, all of which sit in a pile on the dais.

TACTICS

The dracolich uses its breath weapon and spends its action point to attack with unnerving presence. It then alternates between winterdeath corona and bite attacks while waiting for its breath weapon to recharge.

The ice devils position themselves to hit their enemies with freezing breath followed by chilling command, stabbing their enemies with longspears while waiting for their powers to recharge.

FEATURES OF THE AREA

Illumination: This room is dark.

Ceiling: The ceiling is 30 feet high.

Dragon Corpse: Large dead red dragons hang by their tails from hooks set in the ceiling. A character can climb a corpse with a DC 14 Athletics check. An adjacent character can swing the corpse as an attack: level + 4 vs. Reflex; the target is pushed 1 square and knocked prone.

Uttercold: Two areas of the floor are covered with uttercold (elemental ice). The squares count as difficult terrain and any creature entering a square containing uttercold takes 10 cold damage. If a square of uttercold is included in a fire burst or blast attack, it erupts in scalding steam.

← Scalding Steam ♦ Fire, Zone

Burst 1 centered on triggering square; all creatures in burst; +23 vs. Reflex; 2d6 + 7 fire damage. The burst creates a zone of steam that lasts until the end of the triggering attacker's next turn. All squares in the zone count as being lightly obscured. If multiple squares are affected, overlapping areas count as being heavily obscured.

Treasure: The dracolich has a modest hoard consisting of treasure parcels 13 and 17.

CURIOSITIES

Encounter Level 21 (16,300 XP)

SETUP

- 1 astral stalker (A)
- 1 gibbering abomination (G)
- 2 marut sentinels (M)
- 1 breath of Tiamat (B)

To expand his forces, Zetch'r'r scours the Astral Sea for potential creatures to add to his stables. He hopes to either replace the draconic servants (if he ever wriggles out from under Tiamat's claw) or use them against the rebels that endanger his rule. He posts two marut sentinels in this room to ensure the captives do not escape. The gibbering abomination is clearly visible through the transparent walls of its prison; the astral stalker is invisible, making its prison appear empty.

When the PCs enter this room and can see the cages, read:

Two squat humanoids with steel skin and wielding greatswords stand guard in this chamber. Two shimmering cubes stand to either side. Only one cube is occupied, and inside is a floating mass of flesh, eyes, and tentacles.

TACTICS

The marut sentinels do not attack right away, but they try to block access into the room. They respond to attempts at conversation with silence. They know what will happen if either they or the adventurers make an attack in this room, so they are prepared to get out from the trap's blast.

Once a character makes an attack, the maruts fight back, laying into their enemies with double attack, while the trap randomly disgorges acid into the room.

If an enterprising character uses the control panel to disable the trap, the force cages vanish, loosing the creatures they contain. Neither the gibbering abomination nor the astral stalker see the maruts as allies, but they treat each other as allies for the purpose of their powers and opportunity attacks.

The gibbering abomination begins gibbering on its turn and uses eye of despair against ranged attackers. While waiting for this power to recharge, it hits foes in its reach with its tentacles, moving to get combat advantage with the astral stalker when possible.

The astral stalker is invisible until it makes an attack. It moves to where it can get a clear shot at nondefender if possible, using stalker's quarry first and then throat dart. It then spends an action point to charge its quarry. It attacks using quick claws until its quarry succeeds on a saving throw, at which point the astral stalker uses invisibility to skulk away and set up its next attack.

Breath of Tiamat Level 18 Blaster
Trap XP 2,000

Trap: When any creature makes an attack in this room, random pillars burst up through the floor and spray the area with acid.

Perception

◆ DC 20: A character notices discolored tiles in the trapped squares.

Trigger

When a creature makes an attack in this room, the trap activates and rolls initiative.

Initiative +8

Floor Burst

Free Action Melee 1

Trigger: A creature stands in the trap's square when it first makes its attack.

Target: The triggering creature

Effect: The creature is pushed 1 square and is knocked prone.

Acid Spray ◆ Acid

Standard Action Close blast 5

Special: Roll 1d4. The square matching the number erupts when a steel column mounted with a sprayer bursts through the floor (see below). The blast originates from this square.

Target: Each creature in blast

Attack: +21 vs. Reflex

Hit: 3d8 + 5 acid damage, and ongoing 15 acid damage (save ends).

Countermeasures

◆ Turning a dial in the center of the control panel deactivates the trap and also negates the cages containing the astral stalker and the gibbering abomination.

Force Cages: Two cages are positioned on either side of the room. The cages' wall of force do not block line of sight, but they do block line of effect. Each cage has AC 4, Fortitude 12, Reflex 4, hp 200. A dispel magic spell automatically destroys a cage. The only way to lift the cages is by turning the dial on the control panel to deactivate the trap. Sound cannot pass through the cages while they are active.

EMERALD STATUE

Encounter Level 20 (14,000 XP)

SETUP

- 1 githyanki knight (G)
- 1 kryizoth fire mage (K)
- 2 tlaikith forlorn (T)

Emperor Zetch'r'r placed his most loyal guards in this chamber to safeguard the passage to his personal quarters. The githyanki are alerted if combat occurs in any adjacent chamber and ready actions to attack whenever an enemy enters the room. The githyanki knight readies telekinetic fist, the fire mage readies immolation, and the forlorn ready their silver swords.

Although this combat begins in this room, it can easily spill back into adjacent rooms as the guardians work to keep the adventurers away from their master.

When the PCs enter this room, read:

An enormous idol of Tiamat dominates this otherwise bare chamber. Two githyanki stand guard before it. One wears antiquated plate armor and wields a silvery blade. The other is dressed in scorched robes and is obviously undead. Also in this room are two ghostly githyanki knights, echoes of the living warrior opposite them. They turn as one, ready for the attack.

TACTICS

The githyanki knight uses telekinetic fist to pin down a defender, and then closes on a ranged attacker for melee. If the target of its telekinetic fist fails its save to end the immobilized effect, the knight slides it to an adjacent space and attacks using dark smite and then pins the target once more.

The fire mage keeps her distance from the forlorn so she can use dimension step if needed. She leads with her immolation power. She helps maneuver her allies into the best position using telekinetic leap and then punishes ranged attackers with her rotting missile.

The forlorn use telekinetic pull to drag soft enemies into their reach and then hit them with soul strike. They then move out of the room and pull their targets with them to lure the PCs to the emerald statue.

FEATURES OF THE AREA

Illumination: The emerald idol glows with inner luminance, filling the room with bright light.

Ceiling: The ceiling here is 20 feet tall.

Emerald Idol: The idol looms over the chamber and is filled with Tiamat's malice. Nongithyanki starting their turns in spaces adjacent to the idol are subject to an attack.

VICIOUS STORM

Encounter Level 21 (17,800 XP)

SETUP

- 1 caller in darkness (C)
- 1 primal storm (P)
- 2 storm devils (S)

The devils and the primal storm await their master's pleasure in this room. When the PCs enter, place only the primal storm and the storm devils. The caller in darkness doesn't join the fight until one of three things happen: either storm devils are slain, the primal storm is slain, or a creature falls into the pit.

Neither the primal storm nor the storm devils are aware of the caller in darkness. The undead creature formed from the terrified githyanki executed in this awful room. While powerful, it fears the storm devils and will not ascend from the pit unless forced.

The cramped quarters make maneuvering in this room difficult, and so the encounter might spill into adjoining rooms.

When the PCs can see in this room, read:

An appalling reek greets you when you enter this chamber—a stench transcending ordinary decay. Two ledges flank a deep pit occupying the room's center. Statues depicting rearing blue dragons stand in the corners on the ledges. Just as you make out two winged humanoids wielding tridents, a crackling orb of lightning comes to life, slashing the air with energy.

TACTICS

The primal storm—living lightning formed from a blue dragon’s breath—loiters near the ceiling, flying about and raging with contempt for the intruders. It opens with storm bolt, targeting three creatures it can see with this deadly attack, and flies 2 squares so it can maintain its altitude. The primal storm stays near the ceiling, blasting the characters each round until a creature engages it. If it is confronted by two or more enemies in melee, it uses lightning step to slip away. The primal storm pursues enemies that flee from this room.

While the primal storm dances across the ceiling, the storm devils use infernal thunderclap to push the characters into the pit. They avoid melee when possible, attacking with lightning fork until their infernal thunderclap recharges. Each round, they move across their ledges to get the best shot possible.

When the caller in darkness joins the combat, it flies to just above the pit and hovers there. If the storm devils are present, it treats them as enemies just as it does the PCs. Each round, it starts by using advantage of fear against an enemy it can see, giving preference to the adventurers first, specifically divine characters. It moves so it can reach a creature it has marked and attacks using steal essence, and then spends its action point to use double bite. Thereafter, the caller in darkness marks another enemy and uses steal essence or double bite until destroyed.

FEATURES OF THE AREA

Illumination: This room is dark.

Ceiling: The ceiling here is 20 feet high, or 10 feet above the ledges.

Ledges: Ledges on either side of the room stand 10 feet above the floor. Climbing a ledge requires a DC 14 Athletics check.

Stairs: The stairs are treated as difficult terrain while ascending them and normal terrain while descending them.

Pit: A 40-foot pit yawns wide in the center of the room. The pit is actually 50 feet deep, but heaps of githyanki corpses fill the bottom 10 feet and reduce the falling distance. A character that falls into the pit activates the caller in darkness in addition to taking 4d10 damage from the fall. A character can climb out of the pit with a DC 25 Athletics check.

Statues: Four statues depicting blue dragons stand in the room’s four corners. A statue has AC 5, Fortitude 10, Reflex 5, hp 40.

4 Handmaidens (H)

Vraxanault, the Red Terror (V)

The growing unrest troubles Tiamat, and to ensure Zetch'r'r is getting his house in order, she has sent Vraxanault, her red dragon exarch, to gauge Tu'narath's troubles. The Separatists choose this time to strike, coordinating their efforts with the PCs. So when the adventurers enter this room, the dragon interrogates the emperor even as astral skiffs battle knights on pact dragons in the starry sky overhead.

When the PCs enter through the secret door, read:

The door opens onto a lavish chamber. Soft pillows cover the floor near the stairs that trace the interior wall and lead up to the level above. A heavy brocade curtain conceals the side of the room opposite from where you enter. A disk inset into the floor shines with blue light.

From above, you hear voices. Both are likely male, with the first voice, cultured and patient, nearly drowned out by the louder booming voice. From what you can make out, the two discuss Tu'narath's troubles.

Characters looking up through the hole in the ceiling can make out a gargantuan red dragon. When it speaks, fire puffs from its toothy maw. The characters can ascend the stairs as they wish, but call for DC 34 Stealth checks. If a character fails, the massive dragon thunders, "It seems you have other guests. Attend to them. Your house does not seem to be in order, and our queen will be displeased." The red dragon exarch wings its way out through the roof, right into the raging battle overhead. If the PCs make it past the dragon and reach the third floor (such as by using the teleporter), the exarch growls, "deal with them" and then flies away as above. The characters don't need to fight the exarch now, but if they wish to, use the statistics presented on the next page.

When the PCs reach the second floor, read:

An immense red dragon reclines on the floor here. Behind, lying in piles, is its hoard. More stairs lead up to the level above.

When the PCs can see the third floor, read:

Banners cover the walls of this wide room. An iron throne flanked by burning braziers stands at one side, while banners cover the walls all around. Overhead, there is no ceiling affording a good look at the raging battle above. Astral skiffs maneuver, launching volleys at pact dragons and their riders. The githyanki are tearing themselves apart.

When the PCs first see Zetch'r'r, read:

The githyanki before you can only be Zetch'r'r. He has the bearing of a veteran warrior and is not slowed by the black plate armor covering his body. A crude iron crown rests on his brow, a ruby-encrusted scepter hangs from his weapon belt, and a silver sword rests easy in his hand. He glowers at you with his one good eye—the other is gone and in its place is a fat onyx stone.

"You are a troublesome company. I credit you for your persistence, but now . . . now, it is time for you to die."

Attending Zetch'r'r are four handmaidens, fanatical githyanki warriors with intricate tattoos covering their bodies. They wield long, serpentine daggers.

TACTICS

The handmaidens rush any adventurers on their floor or use the teleporter to reach characters who fight on the main floor. Their scream of vengeance power can reach allies on other levels.

Vraxanault is loyal to Zetch'r'r as long as he possesses the scepter of Ephelomon. The dragon uses frightful presence and spends an action point to employ his breath weapon. If the dragon is faced with two or more attackers at once, it resorts to shock wave followed by immolate foe or breath weapon depending on what it has available.

Zetch'r'r engages the closest enemy from the start, using telekinetic vise to lock an enemy down and then strike. He attacks this enemy, closing the distance using folded space if necessary, hammering away using his weapons. Zetch'r'r makes good use of the terrain to slide foes off the upper level to fall to the bottom floor. He rips through his opponents with his weapons until all his enemies lay dead or he is destroyed.

SCEPTER OF EPHELOMON

This ruby-encrusted golden scepter represents an ancient pact between the githyanki and the red dragons sworn to Tiamat. Ephelomon, Tiamat's former red dragon exarch, entrusted it to Gith (savior of the githyanki people) millennia ago. A powerful relic and potent symbol, the scepter of Ephelomon has been part of the ruler's regalia since the days when the first Vlaakith ascended the throne. When Zetch'r'r came to power, though, he quickly discovered the scepter had no power. At first he thought he had been given a false item, but rituals revealed the item's vast magical strength had vanished. What this signaled was that the pact had been broken. Zetch'r'r has hidden this fact since taking power, but he knows if the truth about the pact became known that the dragons would leave and his reign would end, with or without Tiamat's support.

The scepter hangs on Zetch'r'r's belt. During the combat, any character that makes a DC 24 Arcana check (a free action) recognizes the scepter for what it is. A second check against a DC 29 (a standard action) reveals it is powerless. A character can steal the scepter from Zetch'r'r's belt by making a DC 31 Thievery check (with a -10 penalty for the attempt in combat). Once in hand, the scepter can be destroyed: AC 10, Fortitude 5, Reflex 10, Fortitude 5, hp 15.

If the characters destroy the scepter in Vraxanault's line of sight, the dragon roars with rage and abandons the emperor to whatever fate the PCs have in store for him.

FEATURES OF THE AREA

Illumination: Everburning torches in iron sconces along the walls fill the entire tower with bright light.

Ceiling: The ceilings in the first and second floors are 30 feet tall. The third floor has no ceiling, providing a view of the shimmering Astral Sea.

Stairs: Stairs emerge from the wall and wind up and around to the top floor. Spaces containing stairs count as difficult terrain.

Openings: A fall from the top deals 3d10 damage if the creature falls to the second floor or 6d10 if the creature falls all the way to the bottom. A fall from the second floor deals 3d10 damage.

Blood Rock: Where indicated on the tactical map, the floor is made from blood rock. A creature standing in one of these squares can score a critical hit on a natural die roll of 19 or 20.

Teleporters: Two magical gates connect the first floor to the third floor. A creature entering the teleporter's space immediately moves adjacent to the other teleporter's destination square.

Curtain: A thick curtain on the first floor provides Zetch'r'r with privacy. The curtain blocks line of sight, and moving through the curtain costs an extra square of movement.

Furniture: Cushions, bed, and dresser on the first floor, and Zetch'r'r's throne on the third all count as difficult terrain.

Treasure: The dragon's horde consists of treasure parcels 11, 12, and 16, while Zetch'r'r has a small coffer in his bedchamber. It holds treasure parcel 15.
